CHANLER GAVE ALL TO CAVALIERI; NOW HAS $20 A MONTH

American's Jealousy of Russian Prince Was Factor in Ardent Wooing.

SINGER COURTED HIM

When Czar Forbade Wedding, She Cabled Suitor and Soon Had His Fortune.

PRINCE CAME BACK

Then Husband Was Placed on Pension and Told He "Must Earn Living."

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch
Copyright, 1910, by the Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

PARIS, Sept. 10.—Robert Winthrop Chanler, who last June was a millionaire, is now a pensioner on $20 a month allowed him by his wife, Lina Cavalieri. His dream of love has been shattered. The former Sheriff of Dutchess County, artist, clubman, society man and politician, and the grand opera queen, "the most beautiful woman in the world," have parted forever. Cavalieri has Chanler's entire fortune and he is in America penniless.

The Post-Dispatch learned this today through friends of Chanler in this city. Many of the details—how Chanler was duped by the singer, how she got him to transfer his property to her, how she flouted him after the marriage, and her escapades with a Russian nobleman since the wedding, are matters of common knowledge among certain Americans now in Europe.

It was in the spring of 1909 that Chanler, not long before she sailed after her grand opera season here, fell in love with Lina Cavalieri. From the moment he set eyes on her the grandson of John Jacob Astor lived with one object in view, to make her his wife. He went to see her at noon every day, as soon as the singer had left her bedroom; he was with her every afternoon; he went to hear her sing every time she appeared at the Manhattan Opera House, and then took her to supper every night after the performance.

Russian Nobleman His Rival.

All this time Prince Dolgorouki, one of the richest noblemen in Russia, was an ardent suitor of Cavalieri. Considerably over 6 feet tall, strikingly handsome, practised in all the arts of attracting lovely women despite the fact that he only has two teeth, he was just the kind of a man who would take by storm the heart of capricious beauty. Because of his assiduous attentions, Cavalieri blew hot and cold for Chanler. As day after day he asked her to marry him, she put him off, taking care not to decline him, but not wanting to accept him when there was a possibility that she would land the Russian, whom she is said to have loved as much as Chanler loved her.

Then in March of this year, with other famous grand opera singers, Cavalieri sailed for Europe, having promised Chanler she would decide on April 15 whether or not she would marry him. On that day Chanler walked around with his head in the clouds. He had received the following cablegram:

PARIS, April 15, 1910.—Robert Chanler, New York: I will accept your proposition of marriage on my return to New York next season. Much friendship and love. Answer by cable. LINA CAVALIERI.

Mme. Lina Cavalieri, Paris.

I accept your proposition. It is a long wait, but wise.

ROBERT W. CHANLER.

That night Chanler gave a bachelor dinner at the Alps Restaurant, Sixth avenue, near Fifty-eighth street, to celebrate the engagement. Among his guests were Henry Clews Jr., Peter Cooper Hewitt, F. B. Herzog, Robert MacCameron and Richard Le Gallienne.

Czar Forced Wedding.

But Mme. Cavaliere had not decided she would marry Chanler until she was satisfied she could not marry Prince Dolgorouki. Soon after she arrived in Paris she went to St. Petersburg. The object of this trip was not generally known until a few weeks ago, when it was learned by friends in Paris to whom the indignant Chanler told it.

It is against the law for functionaries of the court of the Czar of Russia to marry without the consent of their imperial master. Prince Dolgorouki has an enormous fortune, beside which the fortune of Robert Winthrop Chanler looks like mere pocket money. If he married without the consent of the Czar all of this fortune would be forfeited, one-third to the imperial treasury and the other two-thirds to his family.

Although she is said to have loved the handsome and noble Russian, the fair

SMOKE INSPECTOR IS AIDED BY LIST IN POST-DISPATCH

Official Asserts Publicity for Offenders Will Further His Campaign.

Boiler Inspector Parker expressed his appreciation Saturday of the assistance rendered him Friday by the Post-Dispatch in printing Friday a list of smoke offenders and photographs of the smoke emitted by some of the worst of them.

"The information contained in the Post-Dispatch," he said, "will be very helpful to me. There are names of some on the list that I did not know were violating the ordinance. The list is very complete.

"I cannot take action on the information furnished by the Post-Dispatch. I must gather my own evidence and make my own photographs and make a record of the duration of the dense smoke and so on, and be able to testify against offenders and to say whether the nuisance can be abated by the use of consumers, but the list will serve as a guide and will be very helpful to me."

The industries between Broadway and the river for many blocks north of Washington avenue, which reveal to the visitor entering St. Louis on trains from the East and North the supremacy of St. Louis as a manufacturing center of the Middle West, reveal to the resident of St. Louis, who takes the trouble to look, the source of much of the smoke which hovers over the city.

The battery of two tall stacks and many lower ones of the Laclede gas works at the foot of Mullanphy street were in active operation Friday afternoon.

A few blocks away six of eight stacks of the Union Electric Light & Power Co.'s plant at the foot of Biddle street, and the stacks of the Laclede Power Co., at the foot of O'Fallon street, emitted dense black smoke which joined that from the gas plant on its journey over the city.

Smoke on All Sides.

The Byrnes Belting Co., 914 North Second street, had one stack with a dense volume of smoke issuing from it. The St. Louis Refrigerating Co., at the foot of O'Fallon street, also gave evidence of a heavy supply of coal having been put into the furnace a few minutes before.

The plant of the Polar Wave Ice & Fuel Co., at the foot of Smith street, had one stack from which the smoke was coming out in huge waves and settling into one long line toward downtown St. Louis.

Other concerns in the same neighborhood and northward between Broadway and the river, which showed dense black smoke issuing from their stacks, are:

American Brake Co., Second and Tyler streets.

J. H. Conrades Manufacturing Co., Second and Tyler streets.

F. H. Logeman Chair Manufacturing Co., First and Chambers streets.

George E. Raithel Manufacturing Co. Broadway and Monroe street.

Branch Saw Co., 3000 North Broadway.

Diederich Furniture Co., 1945 North Second street.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

IDEAL POLICEMAN IS SUSPENDED FOR DEFYING SERGEANT

Thomas McCaffery Is Found Drinking With Two Other Bluecoats and a Woman.

Thomas McCaffery of the Deer Street District, who is known as the "ideal policeman," went "joy riding" with two other patrolmen Friday night, and early Saturday was one of the figures in an exciting scene in a South Broadway clubroom, in which the three patrolmen grasped the handles of their revolvers and dared a sergeant to molest them.

McCaffery, in a competitive examination in 1905, was declared by the Board of Police Commissioners to be a model patrolman, perfect in every qualification and was rated at 100 per cent. He is the only man on the force having such a high average.

After they had been relieved from duty in the Deer Street District at 11 p. m., Friday, McCaffery, in company with Patrolmen Michael B. Collins and John E. Barnett summoned a taxicab and went to the Theatrical Social Club, 4106 South Broadway.

Seen by Policeman.

At 2:10 a. m., Patrolman John Heidecker of the Wyoming Street District reported to Sergt. Charles Welsh that three uniformed patrolmen were in the club drinking at a table with a woman and two men, one of whom was a chauffeur. Accompanied by Patrolmen Heidecker and O'Gara, Sergt. Welsh went to the club and found the party. Half filled beer bottles and glasses containing the beverage were on the table in front of each patrolman.

"What are you officers doing here?" asked Welsh as he approached the party.

"Can't you see we are getting a drink?" retorted one of the three, afterwards identified as Collins.

"Give me your names," demanded the Sergeant.

"You'll have to get those from someone else," responded Collins. "We'll not tell you."

"I'll have to suspend you," said Welsh.

Collins is alleged to have placed his hand on the revolver under his coat, and McCaffery, speaking for the first time, also reached for his weapon, the Sergeant says.

Barnett followed the example of his companions, and, it is declared, the three arose from their seats and surrounded the sergeant. The woman and two citizens left the table hurriedly and fled from the club. Before they departed Welsh asked one of the men for his name. He said it was Nelson, but the chauffeur declined to give his name.

"You officers have forgotten your oath of office," he said. "Can't you be gentlemen?"

Identified by Numbers.

"Just make a move," the sergeant says Collins declared, as he tightened his grip on the revolver. "Make a move and see if I don't beat you to it."

"We're not going to have trouble here said Welsh calmly. "You men can do as you please. You can accompany me to the station or you can go your way. I advise you to be decent and go along with me."

McCaffery and his companions declined and backed out of the clubroom.

Welsh had taken the numbers of their stars and in that manner they were soon identified. Night Chief of Police Gillaspy ordered their suspension as soon as he heard of the episode. Sergeants were sent to their homes, but up to 7 a. m. they had not put in an appearance.

ITALIAN DOCTOR'S SON IS RETURNED BY BLACK HAND

While 50 Detectives Watched Youngster Is Found by Grandfather.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Although little Michael Scimeca, the three-year-old son of Dr. Michael Scimeca, a prominent Italian physician is today safely in the hands of his relatives after having been held for nearly three months a captive by Black Hand kidnapers, the abductors of the boy have so far escaped the police dragnet set for them when it was learned that the little fellow was about to be returned to his guardians.

Fifty detectives of the Italian squad had been for hours watching ferries and railroad stations and the vicinity of Dr. Scimeca's home in Manhattan, expecting to trap the kidnapers, when the lad mysteriously appeared late last night at the home of Dr. Scimeca's father-in-law, Dr. Michael Petrella in Brooklyn. The police heard that Dr. Scimeca was trying to raise $7000, which had been demanded as a ransom for the boy. Dr. Scimeca today, however, denied that he had paid a cent for the return of the child.

Much mystery surrounds the circumstances of the child's reappearance. It was said at the Petrella home that a telephone message was received during the evening that little Michael would be found walking on Fifty-fifth street, Manhattan. The Petrellas drove in their carriage to the locality, they said, and spied the lad alone on the sidewalk. The boy uttered a cry of joy when he saw his relatives and was soon snugly wrapped up in the carriage and on his way to the Petrella's Brooklyn home.

Up to this forenoon the boy had not been taken from the Petrella home to that of his parents in the lower east side on Manhattan. Lieut. Vanchris of the Italian squad declared that he knows the identity of the boy's captors and arrests in the case are considered probable.

Dr. Scimeca settled in this country in 1903 and soon built up a large practice on the east side. His prosperity was believed to have aroused the envy of Black Handers and to have prompted the kidnaping.

WEATHER WILL BE FAIR TONIGHT AND SUNDAY, AND IT WILL BE WARMER, TOO

THE TEMPERATURES.

1 a. m.	58	8 a. m.	57
6 a. m.	53	9 a. m.	61
7 a. m.	54

"It seems," observed the Strap-hanger, "that this man Baldwin is a man who flies."

"Yes, he is one of those who deliver," responded the End Seat Hog. "I am making a book that he delivers the river flight, neatly done up, unless there's a gale."

"Of course there will be a crowd, but it will be one too small."

"I don't understand you."

"I mean that one person who ought to see the flight will not be present."

"Who's that?"

"Aviator Curtiss."

Official forecast: Fair tonight and Sunday; warmer Sunday.

The stage of the river: 13.5 feet; a fall of .6 foot.

Time of Flights Today; Best Places to See Them

TIME of river flight, 5 p. m. today.

BEST PLACES TO SEE RIVER FLIGHT—St. Louis river front from Merchants' Bridge south to Chouteau avenue; East Side river front from Chouteau avenue to Cahokia ferry landing; Eads Bridge roadway; steamboat decks.

TIME—Field flights, 4 to 5 p. m., North St. Louis aviation field, 5400-7200 North Broadway. Start of river flight will be made from this field.

CAR LINES TO AVIATION FIELD—Broadway direct; Bellefontaine, Taylor and Sarah street lines to O'Fallon Park, and walk through park and north on Broadway.

AUTOMOBILE ROUTES TO FIELD—From downtown, north on Ninth street to Salisbury, thence on Eleventh to Broadway; north to Humboldt avenue; from the Central West End and South Side, Grand avenue, Lee and Warne avenues to O'Follon Park, througt the park to Broadway; from further west, via Newstead and Pope avenues to O'Fallon Park and through the park to Broadway, or via Union and Bernays avenues and Calvary avenue to Broadway, then south to Humboldt. Autos turn in at Humboldt avenue, 7200 north, and run east to reserved space.

$1000 OFFERED FOR TALK WITH PROF. JAMES' GHOST

Medium Must Tell What Is in Letter He Wrote Four Days Before Dying, Now Locked in a Safe.

By Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The fact that several spiritualistic meetings recently asserted that they have received messages from the late Prof. William James of Harvard, one of whose favorite themes was the possibility of communication between the dead and the living, has led the Metropolitan Psychical Society here to propose a test as to the validity of all such assertions.

The society offers a prize of $1000 to any medium who will obtain from the spirit of Prof. James, when it speaks through them a statement of the contents of a certain letter sent by him a few days before his death to W. S. Davis, secretary of the society.

Mr. Davis has the letter from Prof. James in his safe. No one else has seen it or has received from him any inkling of its contents.

Messages Are Vague.

The president of the Psychical Society in making public the prize offer makes the following comment on the alleged "messages" thus far put forward by various mediums:

"The great difficulty with the messages which have so far been published, is that they are vague, indefinite and crashy and could have been concocted by anyone. Such alleged communications have invariably followed the demise of all persons of note in the spiritualistic field, but the very simple test herein proposed would considerably narrow the question down, and should easily be within the capability of any person actually in communication with the spirit of Prof. James.

Society Not Discouraged.

"We recognize in Prof. James a great and open-hearted investigator. We have striven to maintain his same spirit of open-mindedness toward all assertions and have endeavored to give them a full hearing and a full trying out. That we have never encountered any phenomena of superhuman kind does not wholly discourage us from looking into any fresh assertions advanced as to the existence of such."

COLLECTOR BOUGHT FLOWERS, SUPPERS; SHORTAGE CHARGE

When Melville B. Idarius, charged with embezzling $318 from the Title Guarantee Security Co., was searched at Police Headquarters detectives found a checkbook, the stubs of which showed he had been paying bills for flowers, suppers and taxicabs. He is 26 years old and says his parents are well-to-do residents of Chicago. He was arrested at 4504 McMillan avenue, where he has been boarding.

J. C. Barrows, general agent of the company, caused the arrest of Idarius. He told the police the young man had failed to account for $318 which he had collected for the company. Detective Harry McLaughlin was sent to the McMillan avenue address to make the arrest. Idarius is local manager of the company.

"My arrest is due to a misunderstanding which I think will be cleared up as soon as I retain counsel, he said. "The items in my checkbook have nothing whatever to do with my predicament. There is just a misunderstanding. I have done nothing wrong."

STOCKHOLDER ASKS RECEIVER FOR TWO MINING COMPANIES

The appointment of a receiver for the Great Western Gold Co., and the Afterthought Copper Co., which have offices in the Commercial building, is asked in a suit filed in the Circuit Court Saturday by John C. Grafing, of 328 Maple avenue, secretary of the William A. Stickney Cigar Co.

Grafing charges that of the $10,000,000 capital stock of the Great Western company, only $806 was paid up, and that of the $8,000,000 capital stock of the Afterthought company, none was paid up. Both are Arizona corporations.

Grafing makes charges of gross mismanagement of the companies. He alleges that the Great Western company was organized in 1901, that it paid excussive commissions to officers for the sale of stock, and that the company was soon $100,000 in debt. Failing to force the stockholders to pay this indebtedness, the petition alleges, the officers organized the Afterthought company, transferring to it the property of the Great Western company, valued, Grafing says, at $520,000.

BIRDMAN EXPECTS TO PROVIDE GREAT SPECTACLE IN AIR

Round Trip to Be Made if Feasible, the Route Covering Both Banks of the River.

FRIDAY TESTS ARE MOST CONVINCING TO WATCHERS

Exhibition This Afternoon Is for Post-Dispatch Cash Prizes—Flights Will Be Made Sunday and Monday Afternoons, Barring Accidents.

AT 2:30 P. M.

Wind and weather conditions from now until dark will be very favorable for aviation. The wind will continue at a velocity of not more than six miles an hour, but will tend to change from the east to the southeast. The weather is fair today all over the country, except on the gulf coast.

MONTROSE W. HAYES,
United States Weather Forecaster at St. Louis.

At 3 p. m. today all indications were that Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin would start at the scheduled time, 5 p. m., on his historic flight, arranged by the Post-Dispatch, along the St. Louis river front. Weather conditions seemed nearly perfect, changing but slightly since noon, when Baldwin declared that it was "a pipe" that he would make the flight.

"It's 400 to 1 that I'll fly the river," he exclaimed, after he had inspected his machine and viewed the air and weather conditions. He made two superb field flights last evening.

On the strength of the aviator's statement, the blue flag, signifying "River Flight Today," was ordered displayed on street cars and at designated places in St. Louis and East St. Louis, together with the red flag, indicating field flights, which had been put up an hour before.

"I've hardly a doubt about making the river flight," said Capt. Baldwin to a Post-Dispatch reporter earlier in the morning. "The weather is about as nice as it could be. I would have started down the river at 5 o'clock last evening, if that had been the time set, and it was a good deal windier then than I expect to see it this evening.

"And I intend to get away right on the dot, too, at 5 o'clock," he added. "Of course, if I don't, people needn't get disappointed, for it's always 5 o'clock until it's 6; but I will try not to keep the people waiting.

"I expect to get the machine out at 4 p. m., and to make a flight around the field as I did last evening. Maybe I will make two or three flights, but the river flight is the main thing, and I shall try to save wear and tear on the machine, and to avoid any chance of an accident which might prevent the big event.

To Keep Near Shore.

"I shall fly southeast from the field toward the Merchants' Bridge approach, and shall get directly over the river as soon as I can after crossing the approach. I shall keep pretty near the west bank as far as Eads Bridge, and I expect to pass over Eads Bridge pretty far to the west, probably west of the pier nearest the shore.

"From Eads Bridge I shall turn more to the east and about Chouteau avenue I shall cross the river, passing between the Free Bridge pier and the shore, and keeping close to the east side until I make the landing in the level tract north of the Cahokia ferry wharf. The tall row of chimneys of the Anheuser-Busch brewery will be my landmark.

"I shall have a mechanician waiting for me at the landing place, and I expect to make the flight back north, but at the same time I would advise everybody to see me going south, and avoid disappointment in case I should decide not to make the return trip.

To Fly Back on East Side.

"If I do fly back, I shall follow the east bank of the river most of the way, so that the East Side people will get a close view, as the people on the west bank will on my way down. The wind seems likely to be from the east, so that I may have to tack and saw-tooth around, but I shall try to follow the course I have outlined."

HOW YOU MAY KNOW BALDWIN FLIGHTS ARE ON

Signal flags will be displayed Saturday, beginning at noon, on street cars and at designated places in St. Louis and East St. Louis, according to the following code:

Red flag—"Flights Today."

Blue flag—"River Flight Today."

White flag—"No Flight Today."

Places where large flags will be displayed:

Downtown—Post-Dispatch office, City Hall, Harbor office at foot of Market street, Courthouse.

West—Washington Hotel.

South Side—Compton Hill Tower, North St. Louis—Grand avenue Water Tower, Baden Fire Engine House.

East St. Louis—City Hall and Federal Building.

If river flight is called off after being announced, harbor boat, Erastus Wells will sail down river flying white flag.

Aviator Thrice Encircles Field in Making His Preliminary Test

About 100 persons, including Harbor Commissioner Whyte, Police Capt. O'Malley, Dwight Babcock and newspaper representatives, saw Capt. Baldwin fly thrice around the big North St. Louis aviation field shortly after 6 p. m. Friday. He made one circuit on his first trial and two on his second.

The "Red Devil" had been set up in the morning, but the "tuning up" of the delicate mechanism was not completed until almost sundown. At 6 Baldwin's alert little mechanician, Jay Safford, pronounced the machine ready for use, and the captain ordered the east fence of the hangar thrown down.

For two hours a little group had been gathering outside the fence, gazing at the red curving wings and commenting on the "skid" which takes the place of the tail wheels used on aeroplanes formerly seen here. When Safford made a trial of the propeller, those inside the fence had to hold their hats on, the rudder acting as a giant fan.

"I'm not going up," said the Captain as the machine was rolled out. "I'm just going to try the ground. It needs rolling, but I want to see how well I can run over it."

He took off his coat and hat, and without putting on goggles or making other preparations, mounted to his seat, and as the mechanician started [illegible] propeller the wheels began spinning over the grass.

A 300-yard dash, and the "Red Devil" left the ground and soared into the air. Straight ahead toward the north end of the field he went, with the little group behind cheering wildly. Then he turned easily, dipping just a little toward a clump of trees in order to make a shorter turn. Again he rose, and it was from a height of 50 feet or so that he drifted down, hardly a minute after his start, to the field near the hangar.

Crowds Congratulate Birdman.

As the witnesses of his feat ran up to shake his hand Baldwin called, "Get her ready again, Jay; I want to take another." In less than five minutes he was again in the air, rising as high as 70 feet and making a wider circuit than before. He passed over Humboldt avenue, the northern boundary of the field, and, turning west, was almost at Broadway before he changed his direction to the south. Then he made a shorter loop and again reached the north end of the field, returning in a straight line from a point near Broadway to the starting point.

"I thought you said you weren't going up, captain," said one of the spectators.

"Well," said the grizzled aviator, "I found the ground was just a little bit rough, so I thought I'd better try the air."

He estimated the wind velocity at the time of his flight as about 12 miles an hour. The official record of the Weather Bureau showed a 12-mile velocity at 7 p. m., less than an hour after his flights.

The Post-Dispatch and the Citizens' Committee, which has been co-operating with the Post-Dispatch in the preparations for the events, will give cash prizes to Baldwin for the river flight and for successful field flights. The Post-Dispatch is paying his expenses, and the Citizens' Committee is meeting the ground expenses.

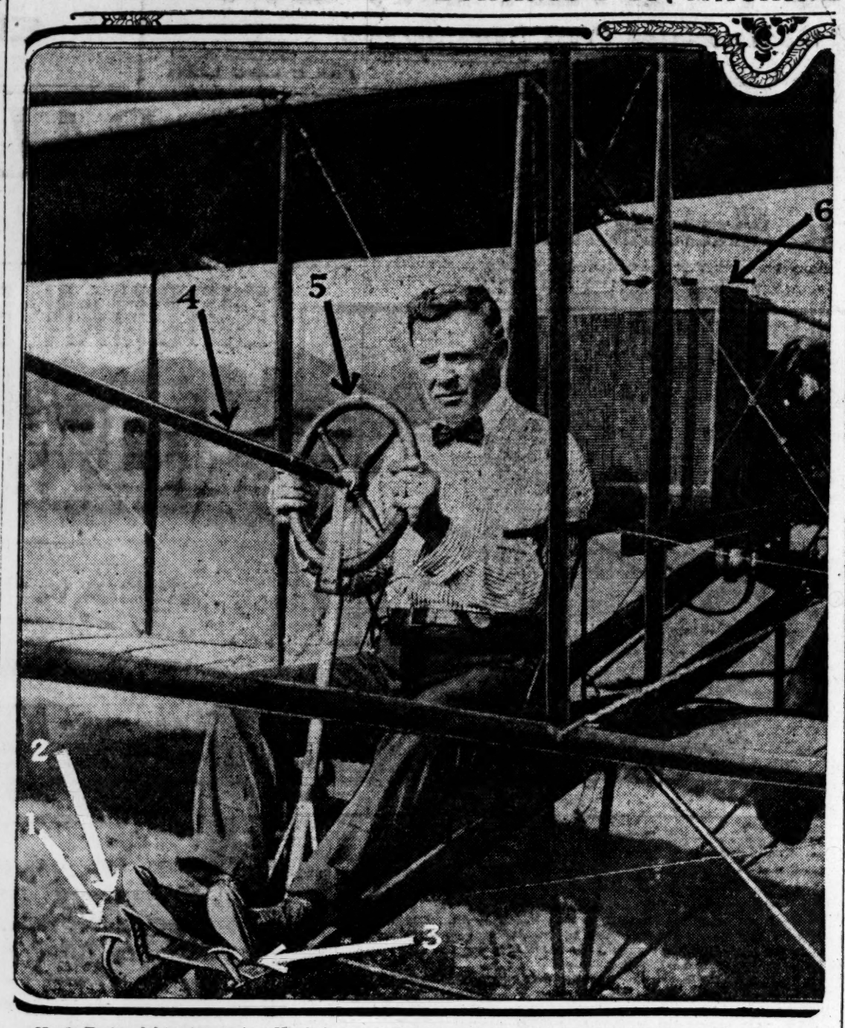

If the river flight is made Saturday without damage to the machine, there will be field flights at the North St. Louis field Sunday and Monday afternoons, weather permitting, from 4 to 6 p. m. All these events will be free to the public.

How to Enter Grounds.

To avoid danger to the spectators, it has been necessary to fence in the tract over which Baldwin will fly, and this will be guarded by policemen, but an ample space has been reserved for spectators. Those arriving by the Broadway cars will find entrance to the field at 6700 North Broadway. The ground was wet in places Friday, but it is believed that most of it will be in good condition for the crowds.

A motor boat patrol will keep the Mississippi clear of boats during the flight, and will follow the biplane down the river, each boat advancing one station as the aviator passes. Orders to all boats to avoid unnecessary whistling and smoke have been given by the local and Federal harbor authorities.

CAPT. BALDWIN SEATED IN HIS AEROPLANE AND DETAILS OF MECHANISM OF MACHINE

No. 1. Foot pedal to stop engine; No. 2, foot rest; No. 3, accelerator, to increase engine speed; No. 4, rod which elevates or depresses plane in front by moving wheel to or from operator; No. 5, steering wheel operating rudder in rear; No. 6, engine radiator with fuel tank between it and engine.

ANGRY COW BREAKS BIPLANE AND ATTACKS THE AVIATOR

Clara Flew Into a Rage at Being Disturbed While Milked.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Farmer William Sinclair's Jersey cow Clara, wrecked the aeroplane which flew last evening from the interborough fair at Denman Hills, Staten Island. The plane dropped down in Sinclair's dairy yard while his daughter was milking Clara and the cow, ordinarily of a mild and pleasant disposition, became very angry.

George S. Russel was the aviator. Russell lifted his Curtis biplane from the infield of the race track and sailed away beautifully. About two miles from the fair grounds he decided to drop and lit within a dozen yards of the girl and Clara, but before he could crawl out of the network of wires around his seat the cow charged full tilt into the machine, breaking the rudder and injuring one of the planes. Russell was bruised but not very seriously.

Mounted policemen who saw that something had happened to the aviator, rode to the farm yard and chased Clara away. Russell was holding her at bay when they arrived. The policemen, with a few volunteers who ran over from the fair grounds, helped the aviator trundle his damaged machine back to the race track. It will take several days to repair it.

RIFLE SHOTS FROM AEROPLANE; EGGS "BOMBS" IN BIG CONTEST

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—The practical use of aeroplanes as instruments of war is to be further demonstrated today at the Boston-Harvard aviation meet at Atlantic. Riding as passenger with Chas. F. Willard in his Curtiss biplane, Capt. J. C. Sickel, U. S. A., plans to take rifle shots at targets on the field while the machine is in motion 200 feet in the air. Capt. Sickel is one of the foremost sharpshooters in the country.

The power and possibilities of the Curtiss-Burgess biplane are to be tested today by Glenn H. Curtiss, the first professional aviator to try out the machine. The sky was clear blue at dawn today and a four-mile breeze from the North was blowing across the field.

A special bomb-dropping contest will be arranged for the last days of the meet. The missiles will be fresh eggs instead of plaster of paris bombs and they will be dropped from an elevation of not less than 1800 feet. Two trophies have been offered for this contest. The first is a cup known as the City of Boston trophy, offered by Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston. Another cup presented by John Hays Hammond is the second prize. Each aviator will be allowed three eggs.

HAMILTON'S CONDITION SEEMS FAVORABLE, DOCTOR'S REPORT

Aviator Declares Steering Wheel Pinned Him Under Scalding Water.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Sept. 10.—At 10 o'clock this morning physicians in attendance on Charles K. Hamilton, the aviator who was badly injured in the wreck of his machine last night at the State Fair Grounds, gave out a statement after a third examination that Hamilton's condition was favorable.

They now believe no permanent or dangerous injuries have been suffered. Various deep gashes and burns from the radiator of the engine of his biplane are the only visible results of the accident; but how serious are the internal injuries will not be known until later.

"The jamming of the rudder of the machine caused the sudden drop," was the statement of Hamilton as he lay swathed in bandages at the hotel. "When I hit the ground the steering wheel jammed me back against the radiator and held me fast, while the scalding water trickled over me."

BOY IS SUCCESSFUL AVIATOR

He Flies in a Homemade Machine Before a Crowd.

CHICO, Cal., Sept. 10.—Success has crowned the efforts of Thaddeus Kerns, 16 years old, a Chico youth, who has been trying to make flights some time past in a home-made aeroplane. He circled the mile race track twice Thursday and yesterday he repeated his experiments and left the ground for three or four short flights.

Everything about the machine, with the exception of the engine, is the work of the boy's own hands. The machine is built along the lines of the Curtiss model.

WOOSTER LAMBERT TO FLY

He Will Go Up With White Monday, Weather Permitting.

MAGNOLIA, Mass., Sept. 10.—The aeroplane flight which Wooster Lambert of St. Louis was to have taken last night with Aviator Graham-White, the English professional, has been postponed until Monday because of damage to White's aeroplane last night.

Lambert had accepted White's invitation for the flight, which had been timed for 6:25. In making a landing from a preliminary flight, White smashed his machine at 6:20. He expects to have it repaired in time to take Lambert up Monday.

FARMER'S SON ENDS LIFE IN PRESENCE OF DANCING TEACHER

DENVER, Sept. 10.—Cecil E. Hess, 24 years old, son of C. G. Hess of Oskaloosa, Io., wealthy retired farmer, committed suicide in his room in a hotel here yesterday afternoon by shooting himself in the head. Hess was a second year student in Cross Medical College. He came to Denver from Drake University, Des Moines, Io., where he had a reputation as an amateur wrestler.

With Hess at the time he shot himself was Mrs. Della Denny, a dancing teacher, for whom he had sent, saying he was in deep trouble. He did not explain the nature of his worry further than to say that he had received a telegram from Des Moines commanding that he return to Iowa at once.

HELD FOR DEATH OF HIS WIFE

Husband and Woman's Half-Sister Arrested in Mystery.

CAMBRIDGE CITY, Ind., Sept. 10.—Pending an investigation of the mysterious death of Mrs. Wicks, whose body was found in the canal here last night, the husband and the dead woman's half-sister, Mrs. Thorn, have been arrested.

Mrs. Wicks was 23 years old.

PROF. VAUGHN USED STRYCHNINE, SAYS OPTICIAN

Attorneys for Mrs. Vaughn and James R. Hull Take Depositions in St. Louis.

Taking of depositions by the defense in the case of the State against Alma Vaughn and James R. Hull, charged jointly with first degree murder following the death of Prof. John T. Vaughn of Kirksville, were commenced Saturday in the office of Attorney Robert L. McLaren in the Merchants-Laclede Building.

Oliver Abel, an optician of 823A Academy avenue, was the first witness called. He testified to having known Prof. Vaughn from 1897 to 1903. He said during that period Prof. Vaughn had visited a local firm of oculists for treatment for his eyes. Abel testified that Vaughn on several occasions told him he had severe headaches and stomach trouble, and that he was taking strychnine. Abel said the professor informed him he always carried strychnine tablets for relief.

Dr. Guthrie McConnell, 4175 Washington avenue, an assistant pathologist in the St. Louis Medical College, who examined parts of Prof. Vaughn's liver and kidneys under the microscope, declared the parts indicated chronic Bright's disease.

Dr. McConnell said he had known cases where sufferers from Bright's disease suffered convulsions with periods of unconsciousness, followed closely by death. He said a sufferer from Bright's disease would feel digestive disturbances. He was asked if text books on pathology would bear him out in his contention. He said he thought they would and cited several standard works to sustain him.

Attorney David M. Procter, a brother of Mrs. Vaughn, was present during the proceedings. Attorney Frank McAllister and W. T. Ragland of Paris, Mo., and Attorney John C. Mills of Kirksville represented the defendants. Prosecuting Attorney James Rieger of Adair County and Attorney Scott Miller of Chillicothe represented the State.

A trial date has not been set thus far. The trial will be held at Lancaster, Schuyler County, a change of venue having been taken from Adair County. It is expected the case will be set soon after Nov. 14.

BANK CASHIER IS GONE; HIS BOOKS $20,000 SHORT

ABILENE, Kan., Sept. 10.—A warrant charging John A. Flack, formerly cashier of the Abilene State Bank, with forging a note for $2000 on James Starchen, a farmer, was filed by Prosecutor Rugh here today upon complaint of E. H. Forney, a director of the bank.

Flack left here more than a week ago, after, it is alleged, the bank directors had learned he was short more than $20,000.

The missing cashier is said to have turned over his property to the bank officials. They made good the deficit. It has been reported that Flack and his wife were seen by a friend at the Chicago Stock Exchange.

CHINESE WOMAN BLUSHINGLY BECOMES BRIDE IN A CHURCH

Attired in Oriental Fashion, She and Bridegroom Apply for License.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Dressed in a native costume of blouse and trousers of peacock blue, a tiny Chinese woman, Chen May, obtained a license at the city hall to be married to Lee Sing, a giant Chinese cigar maker. He wore Oriental costume and a long pigtail.

Chen May, instead of a long braid, wore a fine coiffure neatly coiled in "North Pole" fashion. Numerous beautiful gold stickpins pierced the coiffure like glittering darts. The services of Yip Son, interpreter, were required to record the pedigree and history of the couple. Chen May bashfully answered the questions and really blushed when asked her age. She said she was 25 years old and was born in Hongkong.

Lee Sing is 30 years old and also was born in Hongkong. The couple are Christianized and were married last night in a Catherine street church.

Accused Letter Carrier Caught.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 10.—Frank Osborne of Whippany, N. J., will lose the sight of his right eye as the result of an accidental encounter with a hatpin. Osborne was adjusting the hatpin for his wife when it slipped, the sharp end piercing his eyeball.

BANK EXAMINERS COULD AVERT LOSS, DECLARES CHIEF

Comptroller of the Currency Says They Could Have Prevented Many Failures.

IS TO INVESTIGATE

Head of Department Will Make Personal Examination Into Districts.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept 10.—Close on the heels of the radical shakeup in the ranks of bank examiners, by which 20 men were shifted to new fields Thursday, Comptroller of the Currency Murray today announced he would make a personal investigation of conditions in all examination districts. The Comptroller in a statement addressed to examiners said:

"In almost every case of a national bank failure, since I have been Comptroller, the insolvency could have been averted had the national bank examiner determined the true conditions and reported his findings in time for me to force a correction in the administration in the bank affairs."

Condemns Excuses.

Condemning the excuses made by bank examiners in practically every case, Murray said he had been compelled to undertake a personal examination in all districts in order to ascertain at first hand why an examiner is unable to discover impending disaster in the affairs of the bank.

He will be accompanied and assisted on the trip by Oscar L. Telling, formerly a national bank examiner and now chief of the division of representatives in the Comptroller's office.

Some Able to Correct.

After citing that examiners of failed banks had offered excuses that they had been unable to learn in advance of a bank's true condition, that officers and directors of the bank would not correct conditions brought to their attention, or any one of another dozen reasons, Mr. Murray says:

"The Comptroller also desires to ascertain why some examiners are capable of correcting, while they are in the bank, all the conditions subject to criticism, when other examiners are either unable or unwilling to accomplish like results and only report their criticism to the Comptroller's office.

"Many of the examiners state in their reports of examinations, forwarded to the Comptroller's office, that it is a hardship not only on the examiner, but on many of the members of the directory of country banks, to ask the various boards to meet with the examiner during the progress or at the close of the examination."

Meetings Called Hardships.

"The Comptroller is of the opinion that a board of directors which will not or can not meet with a representative of the Government for a short time twice each year, to go over in detail the conditions which he finds and reports to it, is composed of members who are not doing their duty in any sense of the word, and it is now proposed to find out whether or not the hardship complained of by the examiners really exists.

"This investigation by the Comptroller and his chief of the division is also an investigation into the methods employed by every national bank examiner, and, on seeing them make an examination of several banks and afterward holding a meeting of the directors, he will be able to determine who of his examining force, if any, are inefficient.

"The Comptroller believes an executive officer should know the difficulties encountered by the men in the field, and knows of no more authentic way of finding this out than by going into the field himself for the purpose of encountering in person some of these so-called difficulties."

HADLEY PRAISES ROOSEVELT FOR HIS SNUB TO LORIMER

Missouri Executive Calls It "One of the Best Things He Has Ever Done."

JEFFERSON CITY, Sept. 10.—Gov. Hadley declared today that Col. Roosevelt did just right in refusing to sit at a banquet with Senator Lorimer in the Hamilton Club at Chicago.

"It required a whole lot of moral courage for him to refuse to eat with one of the club's own members," he declared, "but men who believe in clean politics and honest elections will applaud his action.

"I think his refusal to sit with Lorimer one of the best things he has ever done. The fact that Lee O'Neil Browne was acquitted does not altar my opinion in the matter."

SLAYER SHOOTS FROM BEHIND AND KILLS A LOVE PIRATE

Declares Man He Shot Had Persuaded His Wife to Leave Him.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANKAKEE, Ill., Sept. 10.—Frank Kanouse of Kankakee was shot and killed today by John A. Oglesby of South Bend, Ind., who stepped up behind him and without warning shot him.

Kanouse had been working in South Bend for several weeks, and Oglesby alleges that when Kanouse returned to this city a few days ago he persuaded Mrs. Oglesby to leave her husband and accompany him.

Oglesby followed and the killing resulted. The slayer was arrested.

CAVALIERI HAVING GAY TIME WITH RUSSIAN PRINCE ON CHANLER'S $30,000 A YEAR

LINA CAVALIERI

ROBERT WINTHROP CHANLER.

"Time to Get to Work" She Told Husband, on the Third Day of Honeymoon.

Lina did not love him well enough to take him without his money.

So she went to St. Petersburg to try to get the consent of the Czar to the wedding. She did not succeed. Through her beauty and the influence of Prince Dolgorouki she got the ear of high officials and they tried to persuade the Czar to give his consent. But the autocrat of the Russians was obdurate. The fair Lina and the handsome Prince were the principals in a heartrending and tearful parting and she returned to Paris. On April 15, as she had promised, she cabled to Chanler that she would marry him.

Within less than a month Chanler was on his way to Paris. Arriving there he lost no time in getting to the home of the fair Lina and embracing her with all the rapture of a successful lover. It was not many days before the infatuated American artist began to talk about setting a date for the wedding. Now, Mme. Cavalieri may have the artistic temperament, but her business sense and acumen is beyond question. The talk of the wedding naturally brought on negotiations concerning the amount that would be settled on madame.

Business Before Marriage.

A French notary and an English solicitor, Cavalieri's representatives, called on Chanler and began to ply him with questions concerning his financial standing. At their behest he went into details concerning his fortune, telling them just how much property he had, where it was situated and how certain portions of it were tied up in trust funds. He explained to them that he and his first wife had been divorced and that enough of his inheritance had been made into a trust fund to give her alimony of $20,000 a year. Then he showed that he had about $30,000 a year. The French notary and the English solicitor went away.

About ten days later, four days before the wedding, which occurred on June 18, Mme. Lina sent for Chanler. Then she made with him one of the strangest pre-nuptial arangements ever heard of. In the first place she told him the story of her life. In detail she related how as her girlish prettiness developed into womanly beauty she became the pet of certain men of the great world in Paris, disputing leadership only with Cleo de Merode. Then she told of her life in the Paris half-world, of the gay bachelors, the dashing married men and aristocrats who had wined her and dined her and had loaded her with jewels, fine gowns, costly hats, expensive lingerie and the thousand and one things so dear to the heart of a professional beauty—a woman who must get rich before she gets old. Chanler heard all of this, but he was so filled with a desire to possess Cavalieri that it did not disturb him.

Then she told him how the father of her 16-year-old son was known only to a few persons and not to the son himself. She made as one of the conditions of her marrying Chanler that he should sign a statement acknowledging this boy as his son, notwithstanding the fact that when this son was born Chanler was not even aware that such a person as Lina Cavalieri lived. Chanler was willing to do even this. But friends in Rome, whom Mme. Cavalieri consulted, advised against this, pointing out it might possibly affect the boy's right to inherit the enormous fortune his mother had accumulated in various ways.

Signs Away His Fortune.

Then on the third day before the wedding, while Chanler was being caressed and petted by the beautiful prima donna, the English solicitor and the French notary reappeared, bringing with them formidable legal documents. At the same time Cavalieri's brother, Orestes, walked into the room.

Taking the documents from the solicitor and the notary, Cavalieri ran up to Chanler, threw her arms around his neck, kissed him and told him he must sign the papers before she could marry him. She explained to him that by signing these papers he would be transferring all his fortune to her. But also she told him what excellent care she would take of him; how she would live with the one thought of making his life happy, managing his fortune and keeping from him all the annoyances and cares of business life, leaving him free to paint pictures and love her to his fullest desire. Chanler signed the documents and transferred everything he possessed, even his interest in the alimony fund, to the prima donna.

On June 18 of this year "La Belle Lina" and "Sheriff Bob" were married in the little borough hall of the Eighth Arondisement, the fashionable Elysee quarter of Paris. After performing the civil ceremony the Mayor of the Arondisement made an address of felicitation, and then the party drove to the Bois de Boulogne, and there in the Pavilion d'Armenonville was served a wedding breakfast at which the usual toasts were drunk. Lina and Chanler then settled down to what Chanler thought was going to be the happiest existence man ever knew.

But two or three days afterward Chanler began to see things in a different light. He had been spending his time on enormous mural paintings. He did not sell many of these paintings and Cavalieri thought this was energy wasted. One morning after Chanler had finished his coffee and rolls, the fair Lina, who now controlled the purse strings, announced that thereafter Chanler would be allowed each month one hundred francs, or $20. She agreed to board and lodge him, but out of this $20 he was to pay his valet, was to buy his clothes and meet those hundred and one little expenses he had always incurred.

Time to Get to Work.

"It's time for you to get to work and earn your own living anyway," she told him.

Chanler got to work. At her behest he would go out into the parks and paint four pictures which Cavalieri thought would have some market value. Until a few days ago he painted these pictures and sold them when he could. In the meantime he was telling his troubles to Henry Clews Jr., Hobert Lee Mac Cameron and other New Yorkers with whom he was intimate. Re-enter Prince Dolgorouki. Once married to Chanler and in possession of all his property, Cavalieri, it is said, fanned anew her flame for the handsome Russian. Her neck had not had begun to become accustomed to the matrimonial yoke before she communicated with Rolgorouki and he rushed across Europe to her side, when the Prince appeared on the scene Chanler had to take a back seat. He was only Cavalieri's husband.

Dolgorouki began to lavish jewels, flowers and the like on the singer. Then also began long automobile trips through the country surrounding Paris with the Prince, while Chanler, only her husband, painted his little pictures in the parks of Paris and sold them when he could.

While he would dine evenings in the Cavalieri home, 22 Avenue de Messine, the prima donna and the Prince and their friends would be partaking of banquets at the great Parisian restaurants.

Prince at Her Bedside.

Then Mme. Cavalieri became ill and there was an operation for appendicitis. At the hospital Chanler was only tolerated by the singer. It was Dolgorouki who was welcomed. Chanler's friends say that on a number of occasions he would call to see his wife and when he got into her room he would find the Prince sitting on the foot of her bed, laughing and chatting with her. The two would exchange tender glances, while the husband looked on, unwilling to make a scene because they were in a hospital and because madame was ill.

When Cavalieri left the hospital she went to Cobourg, near Trouville. Her son, her brother Orestes, Prince Dolgorouki and several maids accompanied her. Chanler followed a few days later and when he found Prince Dolgorouki there he gave up in disgust and after a long conference with his brother, William Astor Chanler, started for America with Mrs. William Astor Chanler and Mrs. Ashley, the latter's mother.

BEGGS REPORTED LIQUIDATING HIS RAILWAYS STOCK

Brokers Are Said to Have Pounded United Shares to Punish Him.

The preferred stock of the United Railways Co. went up to $57.50 a share on the St. Louis Stock Exchange Saturday. This was an increase of $1 a share over the low price of Friday.

One of the reports in financial circles Saturday was that John I. Beggs of Milwaukee is liquidating his stock in the company. There has been bad blood between Beggs and James Campbell, president of the North American Co., which owns the United Railways.

Brokers influenced by Campbell are said to have been pounding the stock down to punish Beggs, who cleaned up a big profit in the sale of his Laclede Gas stock some time ago.

The report that the nickleodeons hurt the summer garden traffic to such an extent as to affect the earnings of the company is credited by some brokers, while others say that the dividend will be cut to 4 per cent in the latter part of September or early October.

Decrease in Income.

The company has been paying 1¼ per cent quarterly dividend. The last dividend was paid in July. The July report of the company shows that its gross earnings were $988,079, an increase of $44,268 over the same month of last year. The total income for the first seven months of the year was $2,149,371, a decrease of $161,737. The surplus income after all charges had been paid, for the seven months, was $515,150, a decrease of $158,879.

Still another report is that the extraordinary expense of the legal department has affected the net income to such an extent that the 5 per cent dividend cannot be paid.

TOO LONESOME WITH PARROT, MAN, 92 YEARS OLD MARRIES

Bride Is 44 Years Old, Supplanting First Wife Who Died at the Age of 67.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Volney E. Rusco established a record yesterday in the marriage license department in the county building. Rusco lacks two months of being 93 years old. He applied for a license to marry Miss Helen Conger, 44 years old. Clerk Samonson, announced that all records had been smashed. Eighty-five years had been the age of the oldest applicant for a marriage license.

Rusco, who is a veteran of the civil war and a resident of Chicago for 60 years, was born in Waterloo, N. Y., Nov. 9, 1818. He married at the age of 20 and his first wife lived to celebrate her sixty-seventh anniversary. She died five years ago.

At his residence Rusco explained his reason for taking the latest step. "I grieved a lot over the death of my first wife," he said. "It got to be too lonesome with nothing but my parrot to keep me company. I don't believe in the Robinson Crusoe method, as I don't live on a desert island."

CHILD SWALLOWS BIG BUTTON WHILE PLAYING ON THE FLOOR

The 2-year-old daughter of Albert Schaaf, a farmer living near Jerseyville, Ill., was received at the St. Louis Baptist Hospital Saturday, where physicians made efforts to remove from her throat a button she swallowed Friday.

While playing on the floor at home the child placed a pearl button nearly as large as a quarter in her mouth and swallowed it. Her mother took her to Jerseyville immediately, but physicians there were unable to dislodge the button.

They advised that she be taken to the hospital. The child is able to swallow liquid foods. Her throat is greatly inflamed, but the physicians believe they will be able to remove the button.

WIFE FINDS HUSBAND DEAD WITH ACID BOTTLE NEAR HIM

Frank Hall of 4611 Tyrolean avenue, at 3:40 a. m. Saturday, told his wife, Anna, he was going upstairs to sleep, and 10 minutes later he was found dead in bed with a bottle which had contained carbolic acid by his side. Dr. J. A. Youngman, who was called in, said Hall had died from the poison.

Hall, who was 59 years old, suffered from kidney trouble for several months. He was employed by the Missouri Car Co.

WIRELESS SAVED THIRTY LIVES AS FERRYBOAT SANK

Sister Ship, Catching Appeals in Air, Arrived in Time to Rescue Swimmers.

THIRTY-THREE DEAD

No Time to Reach Lifeboats After Doomed Vessel Listed to Plunge Downward.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LUDINGTON, Mich., Sept. 10.—Thirty-one passengers and members of the crew of Pere Marquette car ferry No. 18 and two sailors of a sister ship, No. 17, were drowned yesterday when ferry No. 18 sank in Lake Michigan en route from this city to Milwaukee. The two members of ferry No. 17 were going to the rescue of No. 18's sailors when their lifeboat was crushed. The property loss is $550,000. The boat was valued at $400,000 and the 29 loaded freight cars which formed the cargo to more than $150,000. Sixty-three persons were on the boat.

This is the story as told by the wireless messages:

5:20 a. m., from steamer No. 18: "S. O. S.—18 sinking. For God's sake send help."

5:28 a. m., from steamer No. 18: "Send help for God's sake; 18 sinking."

7:30 a. m., from steamer No. 17: "18 sinking. Help."

7:35 a. m., from steamer No. 17: "18 gone."

8 a. m., from steamer No. 17: "17 standing by. Will stay till all are saved." (This message was laboriously spelled out by purser of No. 17, who never sent a message of that length before. The purser could not understand telegraphy well enough to answer anxious inquiries as to fate of crew.)

9:05 a. m. from Steamer No. 17.—"All officers of 18 lost. Not one saved." Then followed list of officers, seven in all, who perished.

11:00 a. m. from Steamer 17.—"Have picked up over thirty of crew. On way to Luddington."

Officers Remained at Post.

That the death list is not larger is due to the bravery of officers and the wireless telegraph operator of the wrecked vessel. All are reported to have stayed at their posts until death called them from their duty.

Repeated calls sent by the wireless operator, S. F. Sezepanek, who lived in Worcester, Mass., brought a half dozen vessels to the scene of disaster, but none of them arrived until after No. 18 had gone down. Those saved were found by the rescuers swimming in the neighborhood of the spot where the boat sank. One man was found floating on a cabin door, to which he had been clinging for more than an hour.

Car ferry No. 18 was making a first regular Ludington-Milwaukee trip since being returned from Chicago, where for eight weeks it had been serving as an excursion vessel, running out of that port. During that time it had made two trips daily along the north shore towards Waukegan, carrying thousands of passengers on each trip.

Cause of Wreck a Mystery.

General Superintendent W. D. Trump states today that the wreck of the boat was not caused by overloading of the vessel, to a storm, nor a breakdown of the machinery. He does not believe the real cause will ever be known.

According to the report by Mr. Trump, Capt. Russell of Steamer No. 17 was merely asked by Capt. Kilty of No. 18, to stand by when he arrived at the scene, Capt. Kilty evidently not believing his vessel was in immediate danger.

Capt. Russell, however, observed that No. 18 was sinking and lowered his lifeboats just as No. 18 went to the bottom.

According to Mr. Trump, the 16 persons on board, above the regular crew, were four employes of the Chicago Navigation Co., with Seymour E. Cochrane, vice-president of that company, and a corps of extra scrubbers, carpet-layers, etc., who were working while the boat was moving in order to save time. Mr. Cochrane was saved, but his four employes were lost.

The first intimation those on board No. 18 had that anything was wrong was when the wheelman, about 4 a. m., found that the vessel was not responding quickly. The compartment after the engine room was then found to contain a considerable amount of water, though not enough to disturb the firemen and deckhands sleeping there.

Steamer Sank Quickly.

Distress signals were given as the vessel continued to settle and the lifeboats on the port side were lowered, but not cut away from the ship, Capt. Kilty continuing to head the steamer for the west shore of Lake Michigan.

So quickly did the steamer take its final plunge that not a man had opportunity to reach one of six life boats which had been launched and lay alongside the ferry. When the boat went down, everyone who could reach the deck ran for the side and jumped into the lake and the strong swimmers were for the most part able to make their escape. As the boat went down the roof of the cabin gave way under the force of terrific air pressure and with a crash and a roar the cabins and smokestacks shot into the air in every direction, causing death to numbers who might have escaped.

Suction Draws Men to Death.

Among the surging waves of Lake Michigan half a hundred men were struggling for their lives. Agonizing cries for help rose above the roar of the water. Irresistibly drawn by a tremendous suction, a score of men could be seen speeding toward the awful vortex of the sinking steamer's revolving wheels, despite their efforts to swim away.

Perhaps the most remarkable escape is that of Simon Burke, wheelman, who is said to have been the last man to leave the doomed ship. Burke said: "I was at the wheel during the whole trouble and really knew little of what occurred. Because of water aft, the boat steered badly, but I stuck to my post until the last minute, waiting for an order from the captain to leave. This order never came.

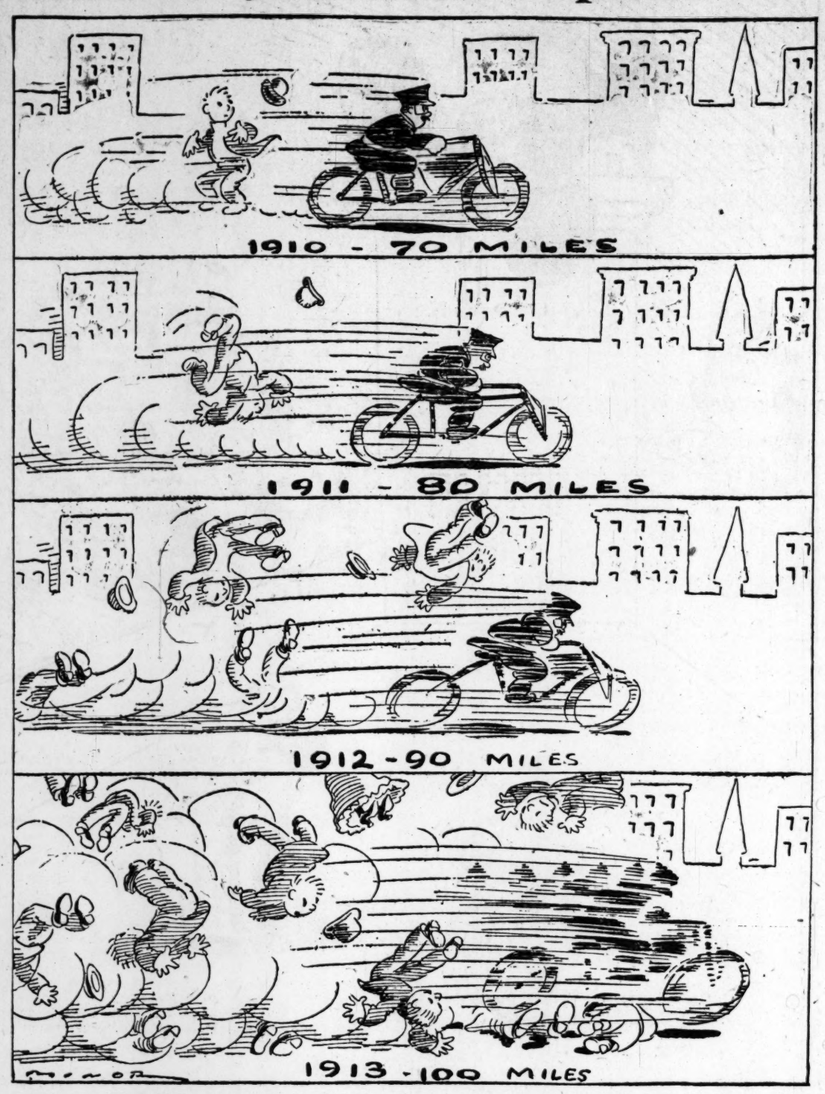

"When I realized that the boat at last was sinking, I ran out on the bridge with a life preserver. I plunged overboard just as the boat disappeared. I must have been in the center of a whirlpool, for I recall being spun around like a top and drawn irresistably downward it seemed for 100 feet. Then I rose to the surface and had barely time to catch my breath when I went down again and was under for a long time.

"After I rose the second time I seized a piece of cabin and managed to remain afloat until I was picked up. I know nothing of what caused the accident."

Seymour B. Cochrane, general manager of the Chicago company which leased the vessel during the summer, had a narrow escape in the wreck. He was saved after floating for longer than an hour on a door.

The fate of this vessel recalls the sinking of the Chicora during the night while making a trip between Milwaukee and St. Joseph in January, 1895, and of which no tidings have ever been heard.

Motorcycle Anticipations

The first official act of President Woerheide of the Police Board was the creation of the new job of motorcycle Sergeant, to which Uriah W. Mackey was appointed. His immediate recommendation was that the power of police motorcycles be raised from 60 to 70 miles an hour.—News item.

TEACHER LOSES $18,000 ON STOCK; ASKS INQUIRY

Woman Asserts Deal That Wiped Out Former Profits Was Closed Without Order.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—A plunge in stock speculation which cost a Chicago school teacher $18,000 is responsible for an appeal to the Board of Governors of the Stock Exchange for an investigation and an accounting and for charges of unfair treatment against a member of the exchange.

Several weeks ago, through a fortunate deal in Sears-Roebuck stock, Miss Anna Straus, assistant principal of the Hamline School, made a profit of $18,000. She decided immediately to take another "flyer" in listed stocks and instructed her broker to put the entire amount in Illinois Brick stock. This particular stock took one tumble after another and Miss Straus' account was closed out when Illinois Brick was quoted many points below the price she paid.

Her deals were conducted by Edward I. Dickinson & Co., brokers, with offices at 145 Monroe street. The stock exchange has been asked to investigate Miss Straus' contention that her account was closed out without her knowledge.

The teacher's speculations have extended over a year. Miss Straus asserted at her residence 4415 Drexel boulevard, that she never would speculate again.

"We began buying Sears-Roebuck stock a little at a time," she said. "As we were fortunate, we put more money into the same stock, and at one time we had $6000 or $7000 invested. Then the stock rose. When we sold that stock we had a profit of about $18,000. We learned that Illinois Brick was doing good business at the time, so we told Mr. Dickinson, who was our broker, to purchase that. He bought us 500 shares.

"The stock began soon to fall. We were called upon to cover our margins. One day we put up $3500. They called us over the telephone and told us that the stock was 62, then 58 and then 57. Suddenly we were notified that our account had been closed out and that we had lost $18,000.

"It was closed out without any notice to us and without our having any opportunity to cover margins. We could have done that and were willing to do so. We still had shares of Sears-Roebuck and would have used that to cover our margins if we had been notified."

NAGEL HOPES TO REGULATE HINDOO IMMIGRATION PROPERLY

Declares Requirements Should Be More Than Physical Measurements.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 10.—Charles Nagel, Secretary of the Department of Commerce and Labor, arrived in San Francisco from Portland last night and is spending a day here before returning to Washington.

In an interview he denied that he had come to investigate the conduct of the local Immigration Bureau by Commissioner Hart H. North. However, he will pay a visit of inspection to the immigration station at Angel Island. On the subject of Hindoo immigration, upon which the Asiatic Exclusion League has recently been concentrating its attention, the head of the department had little to say.

"I realize that it is a most important consideration," he said. "The requirements for entrance should not be mere physical measurements. We should look to the applicant's fitness for his new environment. I am hoping to be able to prepare some regulations with this in mind."

Leper Rides in Pullman Car.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah., Sept. 10.—John Kokas, the Greek leper who broke quarantine here Wednesday and started for his home in Greece left, it was learned today, in a Pullman car on the Union Pacific Railroad. He should have passed through Omaha last night. The local authorities have made no effort to have him detained, as his flight relieves them of a difficult problem.

RAILROAD MAN IS HELD AS SUSPECT IN TRAIN ROBBERY

Jason W. Carson Answers Description of Wine's Murderer in General Way.

Jason W. Carson, a locomotive fireman, is held at Police Headquarters on suspicion that it was he who "held up" the Burlington passenger train out of Union Station Tuesday night and killed Flagman W. M. Wine. He answers in a general way the description given by Thomas Griffen, the electrician on the train.

John D. Schaeffer of 1002 Chouteau avenue also is held, although he does not answer the description, because a saloon keeper near his home told the police he had been talking a great deal about the robbery. He is a former railroad man.

Carson was arrested Friday afternoon and taken to headquarters, where Griffen and J. J. Cassimerie, the negro porter on the train, confronted him. They were told, however, not to say whether they thought he was the man, but to go home and sleep over it, then to return Saturday and give their opinion. Chief Smith so directed them, he said, in order to minimize the possibility of a wrong identification.

For an hour Chief Smith was closeted with the suspect, Chief Secret Agent Mitchell of the Terminal, and Special Agent Pratt of the Burlington, also being present. They questioned Carson at great length, but would not tell what he said as to his whereabouts Tuesday night.

Griffin says the robber was six feet tall or more, with deep-set, piercing black eyes, a prominent nose and heavy black eyebrows, and that he seemed familiar with railroad work. Carson answers this description, and was arrested on that account. He lives at 2004 South Broadway, and was arrested in a saloon at Broadway and Lesperance street. His reputation in that neighborhood is good.

A clew supplied by A. J. Hartling, night clerk at the Planters, also is being investigated. Hartling's suspicion was aroused by the conduct of a man who registered there Tuesday, and who was out the night of the robbery until 5 a. m., returning under the influence of liquor. This man left the hotel at 10 p. m. Tuesday and took a taxicab driven by former Motorcycle Policeman Ferguson.

He told Ferguson to drive him to the Union Station, but got out at Eighth and Market streets, dismissed the taxi, and went into a saloon. He answers the description of the man who robbed the train.

The man had no baggage, and was required to pay in advance for his room and for drinks served to him. When he returned early Wednesday he gave a different name from that under which he registered, and ordered drinks until the management refused to serve him with more. Then he made preparations to leave. He told a bellboy he had to drink, because something was worrying him.

MUSICIAN SHOOTS HIMSELF WHILE DREAMING OF BURGLARS

Wakes Up and Tells Wife That He Wounded One of the Intruders.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Sept. 10.—The police of Asbury Park are trying to find out today if A. W. Von Zuker, a musician and formerly in the wholesale piano business in New York, shot himself in a dream.

Mrs. Von Zuker found her husband asleep in their apartment in a small hotel and bleeding from a wound in his forehead. She asked him what he had done.

"Why, there are thieves in the house," said he, "and I have just shot a burglar."

This was at 1 o'clock in the morning.

Von Zuker told the physicians who were summoned that he shot himself while dreaming of burglars. The wound is not serious. The man was taken to the Spring Lake Hospital, where the bullet was extracted. At the hospital it was said he would recover.

Cholera Kills 11 in Italy.

ROME, Sept. 10.—Eleven deaths from cholera and 18 new cases of the disease is the report for the last 24 hours in the infected district of southern Italy.

WOMAN REMOVES FALSE TEETH INTENDING TO DROWN HERSELF

Also Takes Off Glasses and Shoes, but Is Restrained by Persons Near Pond.

Mrs. Peter Minnebo, 35 years old, of Pennsylvania and Allison avenues, who tried to drown herself Friday evening in Hannon's Pond, on the Olive street road, says she wanted to die because her husband had left her, taking with him their three children—Florence, 6 years old; Edward, 3, and Louis, 2.

Mrs. Minnebo had discarded her overskirt, her shoes, her glasses and her false teeth, and was on the point of leaping into the pond when persons living near discovered her intention and restrained her. She was cared for overnight at the home of a neighbor and was back at her own home Saturday.

Minnebo left his wife Thursday night and consulted an attorney Friday about bringing suit for divorce. Mrs. Minnebo was under treatment a part of last year at St. Vincent's Institution. She has a son, Frank, 12 years old, by a former husband, who did not go away with her husband. He is supposed to be with some of the neighbors.

RELIGION IN THE RAIN NOT POPULAR AT MORO, ILL., AND REVIVAL WAS UNSUCCESSFUL

The Rev. D. J. Worden Says He Believes Satan's Habitation Is Thereabouts.

The Rev. D. J. Worden of Abingdon, Ill., is inclined to think that Satan resides somewhere in the vicinity or Moro, Ill. He encountered so many adverse conditions when he attempted to hold a series of revival meetings there that the bad man would seem to have had something to do with it.

The meetings were to have been conducted in a large tent, but the tent was misplaced somewhere in transit and did not arrive. A small one was substituted and erected near the home of Henry Albers. It sheltered only a few and the rest had to stand outside. Then it rained nearly every night and the people of Moro did not want religion so badly that they were willing to stand in the rain for it.

The evangelist was to have received his compensation, by an agreement with the Rev. B. F. McMican, from the offering on the closing night of the meeting. The closing night there was a very light attendance and a correspondingly light offering, and the evangelist's compensation was not sufficient to pay his railroad fare home.

Some church members came to his assistance and made up a purse for him.

TOURISTS RETURN IN STEERAGE

Thousands of Americans Crowd Boats in Rush Home.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The several steamers which left British ports for the United States today carried between 6000 and 7000 passengers.

The rush was so great that many well-to-do Americans were obliged to content themselves with third class or even steerage berths and gladly paid emigrants handsome premiums to surrender the accommodations.

A Mother's Love

wisely directed, will cause her to give to her little ones only the most wholesome and beneficial remedies and only when actually needed, and the well-informed mother uses only the pleasant and gentle laxative remedy—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—when a laxative is required, as it is wholly free from all objectionable substances. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

LAWYERS WIN NOMINATION FOR CHARLES W. BATES

He Is Democratic Candidate for Judge of City Court of Appeals.

The lawyers of St. Louis outgeneraled the Democratic City Committee and landed Charles W. Bates, former City Counselor, as the party nominee for Judge of the St. Louis Court of Appeals. Bates was chosen on the nineteenth ballot, after a hard-fought contest.

W. Christy Bryan had the support of 22 members of the Democratic City Committee, and he held the lead until the fifteenth ballot, when Bates, supported by the country delegates, tied him. Bates took the lead on the sixteenth ballot, receiving 29 votes to 26 for Bryan, and two for W. W. Fry of Mexico. On the nineteenth ballot Bates received 32 votes and Bryan 25. Under the rules of the convention, 31 votes were required to nominate.

About sixty St. Louis lawyers attended the convention, which was held at the American Theater, Friday afternoon, and rooted lustily throughout the voting for Bates. Judge O'Neill Ryan, Glendy Arnold, Theodoric Bland and other lawyers were always on the ground working among the country delegates for Bates.

Country Couldn't Win.

After the local favorites had been voted for until the country delegates saw they could not win, the county chairmen began throwing their strength to Bates. Six members of the Democratic City Committee voted for Bates on the first ballot, and stuck to him until he won out.

The convention was made up of the Democratic chairmen of the 33 counties in the district and the 28 members of the Democratic City Committee of St. Louis. Each ward committeeman was given one vote in the convention.

This was the first real Democratic convention held since the State primary law became effective. Judge R. L. Goode resigned from the St. Louis Court of Appeals bench after the State primary, making it necessary to nominate party candidates by convention.

Seven Starters in Race.

There were seven starters in the race. They were W. W. Fry of Mexico, B. H. Marbury of Farmington, T. R. R. Ely of Dunklin County, N. M. Pettingill of Memphis, V. L. Drain of Shelbyville, Charles W. Bates of St. Louis and W. Christy Bryan of St. Louis.

Bryan received 22 votes on the first ballot and never dropped below that number. Bates began gaining on the eighth ballot when he received 10 votes. Just before the fourteenth ballot was taken Senator Ely appeared in the convention hall and withdrew his name. Most of his following went to Bates, whose vote was boosted to 21, with Bryan still leading with 26.

Stop heating losses!

Grates, stoves and hot air furnaces offer ways of burning fuel money that are so wasteful and so insanitary that it is astonishing anyone in these enlightened days continues to use them. They fill the house with ash-dust, soot, smoke and coal-gases and by average do not get out of the coal one-half of its heating value.

AMERICAN RADIATORS & IDEAL BOILERS

have taught many thousands of building owners in America and Europe how to get better heat and more comfort for far less monev than is brought about by any other heating device.

The cost of IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators will annually average the lowest outlay. For instance:—An Ideal-American outfit costing $200 and lasting 25 years, represents an outlay of $8 only a year. As there is no reason why IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators will not last as long as the building—say 50 years, the outlay would be $4 only a year. The saving of a few tons of coal a year, which these outfits effect, will easily pay a handsome yearly profit on this ideal heating outfit—to say nothing of the other savings, comforts and health protection.

No one can therefore afford to continue the waste and nuisances of old-fashioned heating. Do not wait to build a new home, but enjoy comfort and content in the present one. No tearing up partitions or floors, nor disturbing old heating equipment until ready to put fire in the new. Sizes for all classes of buildings—smallest to largest—in town or country.

Our free book, "Ideal Heating Investments" tells much that it will pay you well to know. Take the right step today, and tell us kind and size of building you wish to heat.

Every prominent architect and every heating engineer recommend exclusively the IDEAL Boiler and AMERICAN Radiator. They cost no more than inferior apparatus. Accept no substitute.

A No. C 2118 IDEAL Boiler and 570 ft. of 38-in. AMERICAN Radiators, costing owner $135, were used to Hot-Water heat this cottage. At this price the goods can be bought of any reputable, competent Fitter. This did not include cost of labor, pipe, valves, freight, etc., which installation is extra and varies according to climatic and other conditions

IDEAL Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators keep a new house new and cause an old house to have its life and value prolonged.

THE CIRCUIT ATTORNEY AND HEALY.

The letter of Circuit Attorney Jones, asking the officers of the Police Relief Fund to retain special counsel to prosecute John M. Healy and the others indicted for looting the relief fund, indicates that Mr. Jones has no taste for the task. There is reassurance in his clear announcement that no official promises of immunity and no understanding to that effect have been made the accused, but none in his desire to avoid conducting the trials. Possibly it is the idea of Mr. Jones that by washing his hands of the whole affair he will be relieved of possible criticism in case of a failure to secure conviction.

This is certainly not the courageous course. As certainly it indicates a disposition to avoid the responsibilities which attach to the office of Circuit Attorney. In a case which would promise to test the capacity of his office Mr. Jones would be justified in asking for special counsel to assist him, but there is no apparent reason why he should seek to shirk a task fairly within the scope of his duties even if it is disagreeable or even if it brings him into forensic conflict with his brother-in-law.

The best accounts have it that Lorimer smiled as the frantic mob threw the rope over his neck and declined to the last to make a statement or confession. It was subsequently that the mob riddled him with bullets.

HOW TO GET LAWS ENFORCED.

A reader who signs "Teddy," takes exception to a recent editorial addressed to money sharks' victims, and asserts that the city, which grants licenses to money lenders, and not the victim of usury, should enforce the law against usury. The writer of the letter goes on to cite an instance where an official in the food inspection department "said he could not enforce the law against selling bad eggs to purchasers, because the purchaser did not come forward and make charges."

The writer of this letter ignores the fact that certain laws make it the duty of officials to enforce them, regardless of what the public may do. The pure food laws contain provisions for inspection, for obtaining samples, and for prosecution with the State alone as complainant. A "victim" is not needed.

In the case of other laws—and the usury law is of this class—the active initiative of a victim is absolutely essential in order to set the law in motion, because the law contains no provision for self-enforcement. If a victim simply contents himself with writing an anonymous letter to a newspaper, his case may be desperate, and yet he will obtain no redress.

As a first step toward the conservation of Ballinger we suggest securing a can.

GOWNS AND SYMPHONIES.

Discussing the coming Symphony concerts in this city, a New York impresario said to one of our contemporaries that he wished to have a large number of richly dressed women at every matinee. "No matter for what purpose these resplendent creatures come," said he, "whether for music or for some other motive, they are a valuable asset and do not in any way detract, but rather add to a Beethoven program."

It is to be regretted that in his haste the impresario marred the elegance and the sentiment of his sentence by the use of such a commercial word as "asset." An "asset" is always a sordid thing and suggests mercenary estimates. What he meant is that pretty gowns add to the charm of sweet music just as the beauty of a rose enhances the delicacy of its perfume. So understood it is exact and eloquent. It expresses an esthetic truth in the language of social grace with the correctness of a well-reasoned philosophy.

Emerson has told us that when one arrives late at church and has to walk down the aisle under the gaze of the congregation, the consciousness of being well dressed is worth more than the consolations of religion. The elevating and sustaining power of good garments is indeed one of the most familiar truths of psychology. Carlyle went so far as to say that law and government as well as society and religion depend on clothes. He once had the audacity to ask the British public to imagine "a naked House of Lords," but the British public refused to do so.

All experience justifies the claim of our impresario that beautiful gowns contribute a vital portion of beauty to all festal occasions. We cannot all of us live up to the levels of Beethoven symphonies; some of us cannot even reach up for a little while; but those of us who have fine garments can dress the part, and those of us who haven't can go "for to admire" the show. There are times when it is as pleasant to see as to be seen. Let us hope our Symphony matinees will be so ranked by all who attend, and long remembered for the beauty of the music and the glory of the gowns.

Mr. Taft's name does not appear in the platform of the Conservation Congress. In another century Mr. Taft will be known historically as the greatest of the unknown presidents.

ABATING THE SMOKE NUISANCE.

Something more than a minute must be taken to admire Smoke Inspector Parker. Instead of subscribing to the prevalent municipal fashion of admitting that it is so and pleading insufficient help, he is at work, with such force as he has, to gather the evidence, and notify the offenders, and if the nuisance is not stopped, to prosecute them.

It is doubtful if there is any single reform which would be of more general benefit to St. Louis than the abolition of smoke. Aside from the tremendous economy that would result, the advertisement of such a marvelous achievement would be worth millions. It is too much to hope that there will be smoke abolition. But any abatement is gain. Complete demonstration that abatement is possible will be encouragement to continued effort and still greater effort. Eventually St. Louis will emerge from its pall to congratulate itself and wonder how it was it ever endured obscuration so long and so patiently. Mr. Parker deserves the encouragement and support of every citizen.

Three months ago, after a visit to Wisconsin, Vice-President Sherman declared there were no insurgents there. The only job for Sherman is as political reporter for a stand-pat paper.

FOND HEARTS UNITED.

William R. Hearst has invited Theodore Roosevelt to come back to New York and aid him in fighting the Republican bosses; and Mr. Roosevelt has given out the statement: "I am going back to my State as mentioned by Mr. Hearst to fight the bosses and I will welcome the support of any man who wishes to aid in the fight."

In this harmony and alliance there lurks a danger of discord and war. It appears clearly that Hearst intends to fight the bosses and wishes Roosevelt to give a helping hand. But Roosevelt says the fight is his and Hearst must be content to be the helper. Each invites the other to be a follower in the fray, and as a consequence there is danger of trouble in the camp.

There is reason to hope, however, that since this danger is so readily foreseen it will be as readily avoided. The bond of sympathy as well as of interest between the two men is so great it is hardly likely any more egotism will cause them to sever when once they have united. They come from opposite sides of the continent, they belong to different parties and they follow different trades; but their souls have but a single thought and their fond hearts beat as one. Fortune could not forever keep them apart, let not fate itself ever estrange them now. Castor and Pollux live again and have called each other to war. Let the bosses beware.

Mr. Hearst has offered his support to Roosevelt in New York and if Roosevelt can overcome that handicap he will have smashed all records.

CHARLES W. BATES' NOMINATION.

While the Post-Dispatch believed that Charles W. Bates would accomplish a work of greater value to the public if he continued as legal adviser to the Board of Freeholders, his nomination for judge of the St. Louis Court of Appeals is distinctly fitting. The Democrats are to be congratulated on their choice.

Mr. Bates is splendidly equipped for the bench and his nomination, as nomination for judicial office should always be, is a tribute to his capacity, not the product of political manipulation and intrigue. He should be as successful on the bench as he has been in his previous positions and in private practice.

Senator Aldrich is receiving congratulations on being one of the very few who know when to quit.

THE ALIAS.

As the operations of the Blue Island Car Equipment Co. were explained on the witness stand by its former "president," F. H. Niles, it was merely the alias under which men formerly "at the top" robbed the Illinois Central Railroad. In a little more than two years it paid dividends or "graft" of $400,000 on an "original capital of $37,500.

This system of robbery under similar aliases, going on for a generation among great corporations, was extended by those who were robbing them "from the top" to the organization of politics up to the top at Washington. It became a rule, and it is now a rule, of alliance between campaign contributors and those their money elevated to Federal office, that repayment from the Federal treasury should be made to campaign contributors, receiving plunder through corporation aliases.

How many corporations now carried systematically on department books are merely grafting aliases for great thieves? Turn on the light. Turn the course of scoundrelism "at the top" towards the jail and the penitentiary, now crowded only from the bottom.

A New York woman complains that she was robbed of a $5000 string of pearls, but she does not ask that Collector Loeb be searched.

LESS THAN NOTHING.

"Now, mind you," said Roosevelt to the Hamilton Club, "take my words as less than nothing unless in looking back you can see that they are justified by my deeds."

Among the words to which he referred were these: "I feel most strongly that we make the question of public honesty a sham, if we limit the use of the word 'honesty' to mere law." And these: "When I was President I endeavored to act so that there would be no need of raising the cry among my opponents 'Turn the rascals out,' because I turned them out myself."

Upon that summons there will be recalled many scandals; the long training of Roosevelt with Platt; the alliance with Depew and with the interests back of him; the protection extended to Paul Morton; the favors shown the Sugar Trust, to Root and to Morgan; and the recent effusive greeting given to Senator Guggenheim. And so the loud professions of "honesty" are weighed in the balance as less than nothing. They are not justified by past deeds.

Gov. Hughes will not be made Chief Justice of the Supreme Court right at the start of his judicial career, but if he shows quality and is attentive to his duties he may be revised upward into the "best ever" job within the President's gift.

If he is chosen Speaker, Champ Clark promises to drive a team of mules down Pennsylvania avenue—as a matter of training for the other work, no doubt.

Artist Earle announces that he has finished with affinities, but you can't count on his being real good until affinities have finished with him.

Rattlesnake poison is now heralded as a cure for epilepsy and everyone knows the cure for rattlesnake poison; but it does seem a lot of trouble.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Proposed Pension Amendment.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Allow me to enter the following protests to amendments, granting pensions, upon which we are to vote the coming election:

First of all, I consider the amendments the grossest class legislation imaginable. Are there not thousands of laborers and workingmen getting less wages and who are now exposed to chances of being crippled or killed in their daily vocations, and pray tell me who pays their pensions? I herewith ask the editor to copy and publish the attached paragraph, clipped from a country paper, appealing to the country voters to saddle a tax on the city property owner. I am anxious to see how the city taxpayer takes it:

"Authority to submit the amendment was granted by the Legislature in 1909. It proposes merely to give authority to establish pensions in St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph for disabled members of the police force when injured in the performance of duty. The consent of the State at large is necessary before any one of the three departments can establish such a system. But the voters should bear in mind there is no tax for the amendment nor will there be even a cent of expense, not a cent of taxation upon the voters that do not live in the city where the fund is to be established. There will be no special tax anywhere. Without the consent of the country voters it will be impossible for the cities to adopt the system."

A JEFFERSONIAN DEMOCRAT.

Dogs a Peril to Motorcyclists.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I read in this evening's Post-Dispatch of a motorcyclist being arrested for squirting ammonia on a dog that chased him. Nearly every cur on the street chases motorcycles. To collide with or be bitten by a dog invariably means a fall, with its attending personal danger and repair bills. If pup was close enough to get a stream of ammonia, he was much too close and out of his place to be anything but dangerous. The law excuses for shooting a man in self-defense. How about a cur? If a dog chased you at each appearance, would shooting him be considered mistreatment?

HARLEY DAVIDSON.

"The Misery Line."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

There was much talk about the Spring avenue car, but it is nothing compared with the misery line which runs from Grand and Chippewa to Morgan street and returns about the same route. In the morning between 6 and 7 o'clock and in the evening between 5 and 6 o'clock the few cars on this line are packed like sardines in cans with human beings.

Between these hours three more cars could run on this line and then they would be crowded. It is an outrage how the street car company treats the citizens of St. Louis. Where are our city officials that they do not see this?

G. MEYERS.

Callousness of Smokers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

While I was away I read a letter in your paper from a lady about smoking on the cars and the scant protection the car company gives its women passengers. I wish to add my hope that you may use your efforts in behalf of at least four-fifths of the passengers who do not smoke nor do they like to have to breathe the foul air of the smokers. I entered a car a few weeks ago and found only one of the back seats vacant. Soon after a man (?) entered and sat beside me. He began to put tobacco into the vilest smelling pipe I ever met, and the car company permitted him to smoke the stinking thing. I either had to breathe that in or stand up, and that I was obliged to do, when I found I was getting sick.

The cars have been "regulated" as to spitting, cleaning and hours of night trips, but why the greatest nuisance to the greatest number of passengers is permitted is hard to understand. The comparatively few smokers should be made to respect the right of most of the passengers, and the duty of the car company managers is plain: That smoking, or even lighting a cigar, pipe or cigarette upon the cars should not be permitted. Mr. Editor, won't you start the ball, "no smoking on the cars."

MRS. C.

How to Judge Picture Cards.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I see you tell of Capt. Young's men getting hints about art so that they can decide in regard to vicious post cards. Now the matter is very simple, as they should simply judge whether they would show such pictures to their own or their friends' boys and girls. If they are fit to be officers they will decide rightly to protect all boys and girls.

A MOTHER.

An Unwise Decision.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The Hague decision in the fisheries dispute between England and the United States, so far from being a matter for congratulation, has made certain future friction that may lead to the most serious consequences. American fishing boats will be required to keep outside an imaginary line running over the open sea. How can they do that? The most experienced navigator, with the finest instruments made, taking observations on the steadiest ocean steamship, could not always be certain that he was not "over the line." On a tossing fishing smack, for days in the fogs which prevail on the Grand Banks, such calculations will be impossible. Some day a British revenue cutter will seize an American schooner "over the line," then there will be more seizures, more disputes, and then—what?

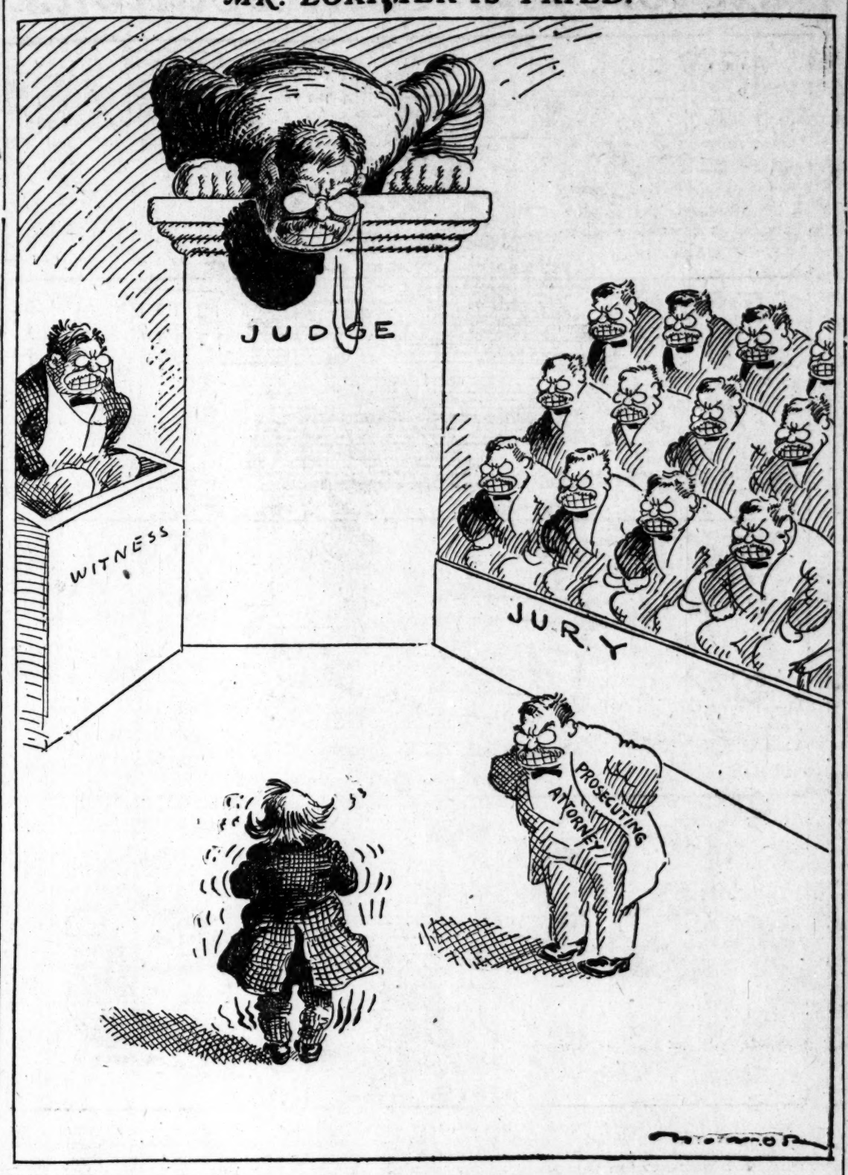

NOVA SCOTIA.

HIS EXPENSES.

From the New York Evening Post.

Everybody must feel the impropriety of the question put to Mr. Roosevelt at Fargo, about his traveling expenses being paid by the Outlook. Nobody but a crank could ask it, and no one but a scoundrel could see anything wrong in the ex-President's letting his employers pay his bills. Mr. Roosevelt is a poor man. He cannot have an income of more than $40,000 to $50,000 a year. Out of his African book he may not make more than $100,000. The absurdity, then, of demanding that he spend $400 or $500 in buying railway tickets, and meeting hotel charges, on a journey which he undertook not at all for his own pleasure or advantage, must be obvious to all. Besides, think how long it is since he has been compelled to travel like an ordinary citizen. During seven years the private car habit became fixed upon him, and it would be cruel to make him take a common Pullman now, even if it were named Belisarius or Epaminondas.

MR. LORIMER IS TRIED.

DIME DRAMA.

From the New York Globe.

Dime drama at the New Theater, providing the dramas be of the right kind, should be great success. Every one knows—for the city library frequently tells us—how big the demand is for good and substantial literature among the masses of New York. Why shouldn't there be the same demand by the same people for good and substantial drama if it is brought within their means?

Fads and fancies of the stage—or even some of its good things, if they are too new—may not be received in the way the projectors of the scheme desire. But it would be surprising if the classics and many of the better known non-classics did not much more than fill the house. Shakspearean performances such as the New Theater gave last year ought to draw great crowds from the East Side at 10 to 50 cents a seat.

The New Theater's new idea is one that will serve to correct some mistaken notions as to its aims and objects. And it should disarm not a little misrepresentation. It is altogether worthy and deserves the widest commendation.

A HARD WORLD.

From Everybody's.

A group of hoboes waiting for their coffee to boil in a tomato can were telling of their hard-luck experiences.

"I've had worse luck than anybody," said one of them challengingly, after listening to the others' tales of woe. "Once I had to sleep from Wilkesbarre to Perth Amboy on top of a flat car loaded with hard coal.

"And what do you think?" he went on. "Every car on the next train that pulled in from the same direction was loaded with soft coal!"

THERE ARE OTHERS.

From the Chicago Tribune.

Mr. Boutell is a perfect example of what is known, by certain masterful overmen in the world where high finance and politics join hands, as a "useful man," excepting the archtype of usefulness, Mr. Cannon, and perhaps Mr. William Lorimer, Mr. Boutell is undoubtedly considered the most "useful" man sent by the ingenuous people of Illinois to serve someone else at Washington.

Clean Sweep.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

James E. Wood, District Superintendent of Street Cleaning in Washington, says that 453,397,856 square yards of streets in Washington are swept clean by machines every year. But compared with the clean sweep made by the machine each year in Philadelphia that is nothing.

Mr. Taft's Size.

From the Charleston News and Courier.

An enthusiastic Republican declares that Mr. Taft is a bigger man than he was a year ago. Why does he not try running again? That might help him.

Perfect Human Bliss.

From the Washington Post.

Our idea of perfect human bliss is to be able to answer an attack like that of the New York Evening Post and get a dollar a word for the answer.

They're Where Sherman Was.

From the Washington Post.

It was in the Ozarks that they nominated Vice-President Sherman for the Presidency, but where in time are the Ozarks?

JUST A MINUTE.

Written for the Post-Dispatch by Clark McAdams.

SOCRATES ON THE JAMES PHENOMENA.

GLAUCON: I suppose you have been reading about Prof. James' spirit?

SOCRATES: Yes. It is very interesting, indeed.

POLEMARCHUS: What do you suppose will come of it, Socrates?

SOCRATES: I don't know, I'm sure; but the prospect of something definite coming of it is much better than it might very easily have been.

GLAUCON: What do you mean?

SOCRATES: Well, he was a brother of Henry James, the psychological writer.

THRASYMACHUS: True.

SOCRATES: And judging by what Mr. Ayer tells us, he is about to describe this place which has so far exceeded his expectations of what the next world is probably like.

GLAUCON: It would seem so.

SOCRATES: Very well. Now, supposing Henry James were going to describe it.

POLEMARCHUS: By Jove!

SOCRATES: Would we be able to get any idea of it at all?

GLAUCON: No.

SOCRATES: What with those long sentences of his, and that singularly involved style that he affects, would we be any better off than if he had never tried to tell us about it?

THRASYMACHUS: Not a bit.

SOCRATES: But William James!

GLAUCON: Ah! That is another matter.

SOCRATES: We can understand that.

POLEMARCHUS: Yes.

SOCRATES: We can gain some conception of what it is like.

GLAUCON: We can, indeed.

SOCRATES: And easily make out if that is Heaven.

GLAUCON: Yes.

SOCRATES: But if Henry James attempted to describe it for us, it could not possibly be Heaven.

THRASYMACHUS: No, that would be Hell.

SOCRATES: Very well. Now let us buy a paper and see if there is anything further from Boston.

AS OTHERS WOULD TELL IT.

I.

As fine a day as ever was seen
For a nice little trip
In a flying machine—
Half summer,
And half fall,
And a wind that scarcely
Blows at all.
Will Baldwin fly?
You bet your eye,
Or bust a hame
Is the reason why.

—Trowbridge.

II.

"What's that so black agin the sky?" says Files-on-Parade.
"It's Captain Baldwin goin' by," the Color Sergeant said.
"Who's Captain Baldwin out to beat?" says Files-on-Parade.
"He's goin' down to Sidney street," the Color Sergeant said.
"For he's flyin' down the river in his bloomin' aeroplane.
There ain't nobody done it since the town belonged to Spain.
They're givin' him some money, but its glory in the main,
An' they're hollerin for Baldwin in the gloaming."

THE DIFFERENCE.

A correspondent of the New York Evening Post complains that Mr. Roosevelt is "an unmitigated demagogue." That is just where we are weak: he calls us liars.

[illegible] an airship appears to be [illegible] battleship.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

C. B. G.—Phone veterinarian.

K.—Franklin County Fair, Washington, Sept. 8-10.

J. H. M.—Saloon keeper has the right to refuse to sell drink to anyone.

EYES.—One with astigmatism will not in time go blind from that alone. Get glasses.

A. F. M.—We have no formula for waterproof plastering. There are waterproof paints for plastering.

STUDENT.—Trigonometry is taught in night schools where there are enough pupils who desire to learn it.

L. B.—House will be completed in about one month. Take State street car, East St. Louis, and get off at Post place.

A.—You would be entitled to dividend on a share of stock bought previous to its selling ex-dividend and sold while it was selling ex-dividend.

W. B. M.—Your three boxes contain 1680, 1764 and 1992 cubic inches respectively. Multiply length by breadth, and that result by the depth, to find out capacity of your sand boxes.

A. M. M.—Egg flip: Beat yolks of 4 eggs to a cream, with 6 tablespoons brown sugar, and the whites to a stiff froth. Heat quart of fresh ale and pour it upon the yolks, stirring constantly; then quickly whip in the beaten whites until it is smooth and serve hot.

WOMAN READER.—Let child drink nothing after 4 p. m.; have it awakened every night about 11 until it shall have formed the habit of waking at that time. Mrs. M. writes that one drop of spirits of turpentine on sugar is a sure preventive; repeat in a week if necessary. Circumcision is said to prevent.

LUCY.—For scant eyebrows: Red vaseline, 2 ounces; tincture of cantharides, ½ ounce; oil of lavender, 15 drops; oil of rosemary, 15 drops. Mix thoroughly. Apply to the eyebrows with a tiny toothbrush once a day until the growth is sufficiently stimulated; then less often. This ointment may be used for the eyelashes also. In this case it should be very carefully applied.

BALDWIN.—Aneroid means "not containing or using a fluid." Aneroid barometer is an instrument for showing the pressure of the atmosphere by means of the movements of the elastic top of an exhausted metallic box. The most sensitive aneroids show the variation of pressure due to a difference of height of a few feet. The instrument is used in measuring altitudes.

SUSIE.—The new law for Federal prisoners provides that for a definite term or terms of one year there may be a parole when the prisoner has served a third of the total of the term or terms for which he was sentenced. This law does not say that a prisoner who has committed another offense after the expiration of his term of imprisonment, and been again imprisoned, may be paroled.

E. H.—The San Francisco papers can give you the date if they have time to look over their files. As this is not probable, you might employ some one to do the work. If the man was really drowned it is strange the Coroner did not respond unless you forgot to inclose an envelope stamped and bearing your address. Merely sending a stamp does not answer now-a-days. Nobody but a backwoodsman now sends merely a stamp.

OWNER.—(Correction). As to a one or two story residence you may build from line to line and need not leave a space between your house and your adjoining neighbor's lot; however, if a flat, a 3-foot space must be left on the side that has openings; if openings (windows, doors, etc.) are on both sides the building law requires that you build no closer than three feet to each of your lot lines. For brick dwellings from one to three stories in height a 13-inch wall is required, no matter in what part of the city you build. (Law was changed from 6 to 3.)

ANXIOUS.—Onions are good for those with whom they agree. An admirer says: The onion is both a soporific and a purgative. Eaten raw, it produces sleep. Fried brown in gravy, with a little salt added, it not only makes a fine dish with meats, etc., but relieves one of the uses of medicines, acting as a purgative. Roast an onion in hot embers or on coals, peel off all the outer scales to the heart and apply just inside the ear as hot as can be borne; tie up the head in a woolen piece. The soothing effects will soon put you to sleep, and when you rouse up the earache will be gone. Or if there is a rising in the head, continue the applications until it breaks. Mash roasted onions and apply them hot on a flannel piece to the chest. This will break up incipient pneumonia, or, applied to the throat, the early stages of diphtheria. It will also soothe corns and bunions.

YOUNG READER.—Engine whistle signals: o means short; —, one second, o, stop, apply brake; — —, release brake; — o o o, flagman to go back and protect rear of train; — — — — o, flagman to return from east or north; — — — —, flagman to return from west or south; — — when blown while running, signifies train has parted; this must be repeated until answered by train men, by swinging a flag, hand or lamp vertically in a circle at arms length across the track, when train is running; o o, is answer to any signal not otherwise provided for; o o o, when train is standing, means back; o o o, when train is running, means stop at next station; o o o o, calling for signals; — o o o, this calls the attention of trains of the same or inferior class to signals carried for a following section; if on a double track use signal — o o when passing trains. Many short sounds mean persons or cattle on track. Distress signal, eight long blasts.

ESTHER.—One method of dyeing straw hats is to mix a tube of oil paint to the right consistency and then paint the hat with the liquid. Two coats should be given, allowing the first to dry before the second is applied. Another method recommended by a dye manufacturer is as follows: "Remove as much dirt as possible by scrubbing lightly with a brush and soap and water. Prepare a solution of hot water, to every quart of which add a tablespoonful of borax or washing soda. Keep the hat submerged in this solution for five hours or more, then remove it and rinse in fresh water. Use about half a package of dye to each hat. In preparing the dye bath, be careful to follow the directions given on the package. Place the hat in the bath and boil for a full hour or more, being sure to keep it constantly under the surface of the dye bath while coloring. Allow the straw to cool in the dye bath, then rinse dry and press under a damp cloth, after which varnish with a solution of one part of shellac and one part alcohol."

P. E. R.—To clean white willow plumes: See whether plumes are willowed by knotting process or by gumming. If latter method has been employed the safer plan will be to mix a paste combining common laundry starch with alcohol. Cover plume with the mixture and allow to become perfectly dry. Then shake thoroughly until all starch is removed. Do this very carefully, or the added fronds will be apt to come away with the paste. If necessary, repeat the process. Feathers that have been willowed by knotting may be safely cleaned both by the wet and the dry process. In the former case a very strong suds is made from pure white soap melted to a jelly added to warm water. A pinch of borax may be used also. The feather is then immersed in this bath and allowed to soak a few minutes. Then it should be carefully drawn through the hands and dipped up and down in the water until quite clean. Next rinse in warm clear water and then in cold. Hang up in sun and air to dry. To dry clean fill a vessel with gasoline to which a little strong soap suds has been added. Cover and set aside for several hours. Then draw the feather through the hands, removing the soil. Rinse in clear gasoline and hang up to dry.

The Wild Desire

WANTED—To exchange two dogs, a parrot and a cat
And sundry other furnishings well-suited to a flat,
To-wit: One leaky ice box and a gas range four years old,
And a bed that, when we bought it, the dealer said would fold,
Two sectional book cases with the jammedest doors they make,
Three Japanese contraptions and a bust of Willie Shake,
A chromo of Abe Lincoln and a picture of a fish,
A set of near-French china plates, a copper chafing dish,
An inelastic rubber plant, a fuchsia and a fern,
A percolator, good when new, but now not worth a dern,
Two sets of Balzac, one de luxe, a copy of Three Weeks,
A drop-light with a rubber tube that looks good—but it leaks,
Two thousand colored postal cards, a few from Gay Paree
A cartoon of Joe Cannon being set adrift at sea,
A lot of rugs once thought to be from Oriental looms—
In fact as heretofore announced the junk in all my rooms
I'll gladly trade and take for them an auto runabout,
The reason for which wild desire I here and now give out
Is that while I am known to all as one who's safe and sane
I want to trade the runabout for a Baldwin aeroplane.

Reflections of A Bachelor Girl

THE quickest way to kill love is to strangle it to death with embraces.

Every bachelor is a hero to his married friends.

Never be jealous of a man's pipe; it is too much like a wife to be a serious rival to any woman.

In a love-affair the great thought in a man's mind is always: "I wonder if I am the first." In a woman's: "I wonder if I'll be the last!"

Every girl should be fond of sports, but not fond enough to marry one.

Hope is the spur, hunger the whip and love the dope that urge a man to win in life's race.

Being an ideal wife means listening to all a man says, and never saying anything that you expect him to listen to.

Many a man would commit suicide for love, if a new girl didn't always happen to come along just at that moment and interrupt him.

Up to 35, the average man shudders at the thought of matrimony as a dog does at the sight of a leash.

A clever girl easily solves the problem of "how to get a living," by first finding out how to get a husband.

Banish the idea that a thing CAN'T be done because it never HAS been done before. Only a matter of five years ago the Wright brothers were being universally guyed as "visionaries!"

How the world does rightfully toss up its cap for the horse (or man) that "comes from behind," makes a dazzling stretch run after looking well beaten, and wins on the wire by a face!

Oh, so "They say," do they? Let 'em chirp!

A little while from now and those Tears will be one with the Shining Sea!

As you cross your threshold tonight, pour out a Libation on the Lintel of Laughter.

Many a worthy and deserving man has held down a park bench—but not a minute after he had a snail's chance to beat it away from the bench.

There is something strangely vapid about the remark of a young man who, with scarcely any down on his lip, declares that he is down in the mouth.

The straw hat begins to look pretty punk and warped—but September the fifteenth is only around the corner.

THE GIRL FROM HIS TOWN

By Marie Van Vorst

(Copyright, 1910, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Dan Blair, heir to $50,000,000, goes to London from his home town in Montana. Partly because of his wealth and partly because of his personality and his adept use of slang, he becomes popular in English society and is "taken up" by the Duchess of Breakwater. In company with Lady Breakwater, Dan sees a performance at the London Gaiety. He recognizes Letty Lane, the star, as a girl who once sang in a church choir in his home town. Lord Galorey warns Ruggles, Dan's business agent, that certain English society women have designs on the young man's money. Ruggles decides to save Dan both from society and the opera singer, Letty Lane. The Duchess of Breakwater, showing her jealousy, refuses to accede to Dan's request that she become the social sponsor of Letty. Dan follows Letty Lane to her dressing room in the Gaiety. She faints and he carries her to a couch. She revives her and she dances as usual in the second act. Letty accepts Dan's invitation to a dinner with Ruggles as the other invited guest, this dinner Letty asks Dan to furnish money to build a rest home for theatrical women. Riding home with Letty Lane in her automobile Dan tells her of his engagement to marry the Duchess of Breakwater. Letty congratulates him. Dan endeavors to induce Letty to sing at the Duchess' entertainment. Letty is interview he, for the first time, realizes jealous of the Duchess. Letty advises Dan to break his marriage engagement with the Duchess. As Galorey loves the Duchess this leads to a quarrel.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Musicale Program.

THE duchess ran Dan, made plans, set the pace, and they were very much in evidence during the season. The young American, good-natured and generous, the duchess beautiful and knowing, were the observed of London, and those of her friends who would have tolerated Dan on account of his money, ended by sincerely liking him. The wedding day had not been fixed as yet, and Dan, was not so violently carried away that he could not wait to be married. Meanwhile Gordon Galorey thanked God for the delay and hoped for a miracle to break the spell over his friend's son before it should be too late. In early May the question came up regarding the musicale. The duchess made her list and arranged the Sunday afternoon and her performers to suit her taste, and the week before lounged in her boudoir when Dan and Galorey appeared for a late morning call.

"There, Dan," she said, holding out a bit of paper, "look at the list and the program, will you?"

"Sounds and reads all right," commented Dan, handing it on to Galorey.

Besides being an artistic event, she intended that the concert should serve to present Dan to her special set. She now lit a cigarette and gave one to each of her friends, lighting the Englishman's herself.

"The best names in London," Lord Galorey said. "You see, Dan, we shall trot you out in a royal way. I hope you fully appreciate how swagger this is to be."

Glancing at the list Blair remarked:

"But I don't see Miss Lane's name?"

"Why should you?" the duchess answered sharply.

"Why, we planned all along that she was to sing," he returned.

She gave a long puff to her cigarette.

"We did rather speak of it. But we shall do very well as we are. The program is full up and it's perfectly ripping as it stands."

"Yes, there's only just one thing she missed with it" the her smiled good-naturedly, "and it's easy enough to run her in. I guess Miss Lane could be run in most anywhere on any program and not clear the house."

Lord Galorey, who knew nothing about the subject under discussion, said tactfully: "Why, of course, Letty Lane is perfectly charming, but you couldn't get her, my dear chap."

"I think we will let the thing stand as it is," said the duchess, going back to her desk and stirring her paper about. "It's really too late now, you know, Dan."

Unruffled, but with a determination which Lord Galorey and the lady were far from guessing, Blair resumed tranquility:

"Oh, I guess she'll come in all right, late as it is. We'll send word to her and fix it up."

The duchess turned to him, annoyed: "Oh, don't be a beastly bore, dear—you are not really serious."

Dan still smiled at her sweetly. "You bet your life I am, though, Lily."

She rang a bell at the side of her desk, and when the footman came in gave him the sheet of paper. "See that this is taken at once to the stationer's."

"Better wait, Lily"—her fiance extended his hand—"until the program is filled out the way it is going to stand." And Blair fixed his handsome eyes on his future wife. "Why, we got this shindig up," he noted irreverently, "just so Miss Lane could sing at it."

"Nonsense," she cried, angry and powerless, "you ridiculous creature! Fancy me getting up a musicale for Letty Lane! Do tell Dan to stop bothering and fussing, Gordon. He's too ridiculous!"

And Lord Galorey said: "What is the row anyway?"

"Why, I want Miss Lane to sing here on Sunday," Dan explained.

"And I don't want her," finished the Duchess of Breakwater, who was evidently unwilling to force a scene before Lord Galorey. She handed the list to her servant, but Dan intercepted it.

"Don't send out that list, Lily, as it is."

He gave it back to her, and his tone was so cool, his expression so decided and quiet, that she was disarmed, and dismissed the servant, telling him to return when she should ring again. Coloring with anger, she tapped the envelope against her brilliantly polished nails.

If she had been married to Blair she would have burst into a violent rage; if he had been poorer than he was she would have put him in his place. Lord Galorey understood the contraction of her brows and lips as Dan reminded: "You promised me that you would have her, you know, Lily."

"Give in, Lily," Galorey advised, rising from the chair where he was lounging. "Give in gracefully."

And she turned on Galorey the anger which she dared not show the other man. But Dan interrupted her, explaining simply:

"I knew the girl when she was a kid; she is from my old home, and I want Lily to ask her here to sing for us, and then to see if we can't do something to get her out of the state she is in."

Galorey repeated vaguely, "State?"

"Why, she's all run down, tired out; she's got no real friends in London."

The other man flicked the ash from his cigarette and looked at Blair's boy through his monocle.

"And you thought that Lily might [illegible] her chance?"

"Yes," nodded Dan, "just give her a lift, you know."

Galorey nodded back, smiling gently. "I see, I see—a moral, spiritual lift? I see—I see." He glanced at the woman with his strange smile.

She put her cigarette down and seated herself, clasping her hands around her knees and looked at her fiance.

"It's none of my business what Letty Lane's reputation is. I don't care, but you must understand one thing, Dan, I'm not a reformer, or a charitable institution, and if she comes here it is purely professional."

He took the subject as settled, and asked for a copy of the program and put it in his pocket.

"Oh, I guess she'll come in all right, late as it is. We'll send word to her and fix it up."

The duchess turned to him, annoyed: "Oh, don't be a beastly bore, dear—you are not really serious."

Dan still smiled at her sweetly. "You bet your life I am, though, Lily."

The duchess turned to him, annoyed: "Oh, don't be a beastly bore, dear—you are not really serious."

Galorey remained, smoking, and the duchess continued her notes in silence, cooling down at her desk. Her companion knew her too well to speak to her until she had herself in hand, and when finally she took up her pen and turned about, she appeared conscious for the first of his presence.

"Here still!" she exclaimed.

"I thought I might do for a safety valve, Lily. You could let some of your anger out on me."

The duchess left her desk and came over to him.

"I expect you despise me thoroughly, don't you, Gordon?"

They had not been alone together since her engagement to Blair, for she had taken pains to avoid every opportunity for a tete-a-tete.

"Despise you?" he repeated gently. "It's awfully hard, isn't it, for a chap like us to despise anybody? We're none of us used to the best quality of behavior, you know, my dear girl."

"Don't talk rot, Gordon," she murmured.

"You didn't ask my advice," he continued, "but I don't hesitate to tell you that I have done everything I could to save the boy."

She accepted this philosophically. "Oh, I knew you would; I quite expected it, but—" and in the look she threw at him there was more liking than resentment—"I knew you, too; you couldn't go very far, my dear fellow."

"I think Dan Blair is excellent stuff," Gordon said.

"He is the greenest, youngest, most ridiculous infant," she exclaimed with irritation, and he laughed.

"His money is old enough to walk, however, isn't it, Lily?" She made an angry gesture.

"I expected you'd say something loathsome."

Her companion met her eyes directly. She left her chair and came and sat down beside him on the small sofa. As he did not move, or look at her, but regarded his cigarette with interest, she leaned close to him and whispered: "Gordon, try to be nice and decent. Try to forget yourself. Don't you see what a wonderful chance it is for me, and that, as far as you and I are concerned, it can't go on?"

The face of the man by her side grew somber. The charm this woman had for him had never lessened since the day when he told her he loved her, long before his marriage, and they were both too poor.

"We have always been too poor, and Edith is jealous of me every day and hour of her life. Can't you be generous?"

He rose and stood over her, lookher somewhat softened face, but his eyes were hard and his face very pale.

"You had better go, Gordon," she said slowly; "you had better go. . ."

Then, as he obeyed her and went like a flash as far as the door, she followed him and whispered softly: "If you're really only jealous, I can forgive you."

He managed to get out: "His father was my friend; he sent the boy to me and I've been a bad guardian." He made a gesture of despair. "Put yourself in my place. Let Dan Blair go, Lily; let him go."

Her eyelids flickered a little, and she said sharply; "You're out of your senses, Gordon—and what if I love him?"

With a low exclamation he caught her hand at the wrist so hard that she cried out, and he said between his teeth: "You don't love him! Take those words back!"

"Of course I do. Let me free!"

"No," he said passionately, holding her fast. "Not until you take that back."

His face, his tone, his force, dominated her; the remembrance of their past, a possible future, made her waver under his eyes, and the woman smiled at him as Blair had never seen her smile.

"Very well, then, goose," she capitulated almost tenderly; "I don't love that boy, of course. I'm marrying him for his money. Now, will you let me go?"

But he held her still more firmly and kissed her several times before he finally set her free, and went out of the house miserable—bound to her by the strongest chains—bound in his conscience and by honor to his trust to Dan's father, and yet handicapped by another sense of honor which decrees that man must keep silence to the end.

OBEYING ORDERS.

At the piano Mrs. Eaton was guiding Edith and Edward and Jack through the intricacies of an old English melody, when she became aware that the twins were adding their voices from an indiscreet distance and stopped playing.

"Children," she exclaimed, "you are not allowed to join in the chorus with Edith and Edward."

"We weren't," the twins protested, in slightly resentful tone. "We were singing something quite different."—Ideas.

POINTED?

"May I ask what is the nature of your fortune, madam?"

"My face is my fortune, sir."

"Sorry, madam, but your investment has some very bad features."—Baltimore American.

"She doesn't know where the baby gets his bad temper from."

"That's strange. Most young mothers can place that sort of responsibility in a jiffy."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

What to Wear

The Season's Novelties as Shown in St. Louis Shops.

THE hat shapes for the coming season can be summed up under three distinct heads, the large trimmed models, of which there is an immense variety to select from; the cloche, the Charlotte Corday, hats, and the turbans.

Plaid silk waists hold a prominent place in the new displays. They will be extensively worn, especially the Scotch plaids, and a nice one can be bought for $5.

The mushroom brim continues to be the favorite both for adults and children. In the former case there are slight variations, such as a kink in front or an upward flare in the back, and so on.

Among the new fall dress materials the rough effects are quite noticeable. In selecting these goods the home dressmaker should pay heed to the weave as some of the novelties are so loosely woven that they will readily pull out and soon give the garment a shapeless appearance.

Fluffy marabout plumes, that fall over the crown quite as gracefully as the longed-for willow plume, will appeal to those whose purses prohibit the gratifying of all desires. They can be had in black and white at $1.98. In veilings the hexagon meshes are still in demand, but are being rapidly superseded by the diamond meshes.

Figured shirt waist slips of silk mull in exquisite floral designs are $1.95, and princess slips in the same material and patterns are $3.95.

The various shades of rose promise to be much in millinery this fall. The colors range from the palest tint to the deep American Beauty, and ashes of roses is also in great evidence.

The soft, lightweight marabout makes an ideal neckpiece. Broad, flat scarfs having the center of varicolored marabout and a border of the plain are very attractive and sell at $49.75.

Draped satin ready-to-wear hats are now in demand. Very neat models are selling at $2.48.

Love and Matrimony

Advice on Affairs of the Heart, Written for the Post-Dispatch
By BETTY VINCENT.

IF a man seeking a beautiful violin or automobile for the first time should exclaim: "I am so delighted with its mechanism and uses!" wouldn't you rightly think him a lunatic? Then how about the man or girl who "falls in love at first sight?" Is he or she any less a lunatic? At first sight a girl decides she loves a man; that he is the one man on earth to rule or guide her future life, her destiny and happiness. What does she know about him? Nothing. His real character (the character it takes months of close study to find out) is a sealed book to her.

It is the same—if not worse—with the man who falls in love with a girl at first sight. She is pretty, clever, attractive. Very well; but can she cook, keep house, make a home happy? Is her temper sweet, her soul white? Love at first sight does not tell such secrets. Its victims too often plunge blindly into lifelong misery. Love at first sight is not love at all; for love implies knowledge, and you really know nothing of the person with whom you fall in love at sight. I do not say that two people cannot be attracted strongly toward each other at first sight, and that attraction may or may not deepen, in time, into true love. That is quite another matter.

If so-called "love at first sight" attacks you, give it time to prove—or disprove—itself.

HELEN writes:

"I am engaged to a young business man and people that have business dealings with him speak very highly of him, but his sisters say that he is very strict with his help and hard to get along with, and they think that I will have the same treatment that his help gets if I were to marry him. But when he comes to see me he always seems happy to see me and then I cannot believe his sisters' stories. He seems to me very kind and he has a heart as true as gold. His mother and my mother think the world and all of him. His brothers, also business men, say that he is hard to beat when it comes to business, but they praise his life in his home."

Use your own judgment. A man's sisters are not always the best judges of his character. Nor do they always seek the kindest things to say of him. Follow your own heart; not his sisters' advice.

D. E. WRITES:

"I am in love with a young man, but my parents and friends seem to think I am too young for it to be real love and instead that it is only a fancy on both sides. What is the best way to test my love?"

As you do not tell me your age, I cannot say whether you are too young to be really in love. True love needs no "test." It exists, or it does not exist, and "tests" often kill or wound it.

An Unsigned Postal and a Reunion

It meant the reuniting of a boy and girl, who had been separated while children, upon the death of their parents.

He had become of age and wanted to find his sister.

Within a week after the delivery of the unsigned postal, two grown children sat together in the parlor of a luxurious home in the Missouri Capital.

They had become acquainted again as brother and sister.

"How did I know you were here? See that?" It was the postal. "I don't know who wrote it, but a Post-Dispatch Want Ad brought it."

Post-Dispatch Wants are entrusted with many seemingly impossible tasks. They are used in over a hundred ways to lighten burdens and promote happiness.

The Post-Dispatch is the greatest Want Medium in the world! It prints more Wants in proportion to population than any other metropolitan newspaper on earth.

We must not forget the babies. They need pure milk during this changeable weather. It is probable that we will have many warm days in September. The sudden September changes make it necessary that the little ones be given careful attention.

Babies' Hour at the Pure Food Show at the Coliseum, September 19 to 24, is given a sort of international touch by the offer made by the Holland-American Trading Co. of Amsterdam to donate 100 packages of Holland food products to be sold at the booths of the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund for the benefit of the babies. The donation has been accepted through Rhey McCord Jr., manager of the Coliseum, and the food products of the foreign country will be on sale at the two booths near the main entrance.

Interest Is Increasing.

The interest of the exhibitors at the show is daily increasing. The merchants seem well pleased with the plan to give the total receipts of the hour between 2 p. m. and 3 p. m., Saturday, September 24, to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund in aid of the babies of St. Louis. The total receipts at the box office of the Coliseum during that hour will be donated to the fund.

More Milk Is Needed.

Despite the cool weather the number of mothers who apply at the Post-Dispatch stations for pure milk for their babies has shown no appreciable diminution. It is a mistaken notion to think that a sudden drop in temperature does away with the necessity of supplying the milk.

A child who has been fed on the modified milk supplied through the agency of the fund will suffer greatly if the supply of that food, suited to its individual needs, is suddenly withdrawn.

There is still much work to do and there are many babies in St. Louis who have just started taking the milk and who must have it for at least a month to come.

EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS OPEN-AIR MEET ATTENDED BY 75,000

Archbishop O'Connell of Philadelphia Is the Speaker of the Day.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—A throng of 75,000 assembled at Fletcher's Field today for the first open-air ceremony of the Eucharistic Congress. Archbishop Farley of New York, who presided at the ceremony, drove out to the place of assemblage with Archbishop Bruchesi. On his arrival he was escorted to the temporary chapel where he said the mass.

The preacher of the day was Monsignor O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston.

WE ARE ALL 23 CENTS RICHER

Uncle Sam Says We Have More Money This Month Than Last.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Count your change—unless Uncle Sam's figures are wrong, every man, woman and child in the United States has 23 cents more today than he did a month ago.

September 1st there were in circulation $3,155,726,847 and the nation's wealth per capita was $34.33.

The gain for the month of August in national circulation amounted to a shade under twenty-two millions, which if evenly divided would add just about 23 cents to your pocket money.

"BURIED ALIVE."

A SLY and subtle humor is the distinguishing and delightful characteristic of "Buried Alive," a new English novel by Arnold Bennett, which concerns itself with the fortunes of a great English painter who was glad to permit his valet's body mistakenly to be interred as his own in Westminster Abbey because this relieved his shy soul of the plague of British notoriety which is one of the penalties of British fame.

This quiet humor, at times saturnine in quality, finds employment in chuckling at many things British during the progress of the story so refreshingly illuminated by its curiously searching rays. The author, through the medium of his hero, one Priam Farll, the great painter in question, zestfully improves every opportunity to thrust keen needles of satire through the thick hide of English Philistinism as seen with eyes of artistic insight, emphasizing anew the protest of sensitive genius against a racial denseness and worship of conventionality that has never failed to hamper and distress its greatest creative minds. Priam Farll, indeed, is the embodiment of that unhappiest of Fate's ironies, a supreme artist born and bred in an English afternoon tea atmosphere of the "lionizing" of artists, escape from which seems possible only by recourse to the "fearful refuge" of expatriation.

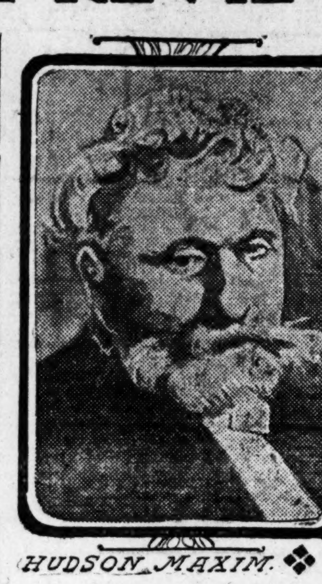

It was this resentment of his racial environment that led to Priam Farll's silence when he saw that it was himself, instead of Henry Leek, his valet, who was supposed to have died in their secluded Selwood Terrace rooms, and thereafter to insure, by continued muteness, the grim hoaxing of the English people consummated when Henry Leek's mortal remains were laid to rest in the "National Valhalla" of British greatness, following certain wirepulling details which afford much enjoyment to the author and his readers. It was a phase of the same revolt against "things as they are" in English society that later led Priam Farll to find his life's content in marying a buxom lower-class widow of Putney who had no more thought of caste or art than the babe unborn. And, finally, he was consistently true to this same spirit when, proclaimed again, much against his will, as Priam Farll instead of Henry Leek, he promptly took steamer with his comfortable Putney wife and fled forever from the "singular isle" that never so unutterably bores its gifted ones as when it essays to prove that it understands them and their work.

The little book telling this extraordinary story with such fidelity to under-the-surface truths is so distinctly original and astray from the beaten path that one scarcely dares hope for its popular success either in England or America. The one promiseful factor for such success is its sheer audacity. This may eventually set all England talking about it—and, of course, when all England talks of a new novel all America is wild to read it.—(Brentano's, New York.)

"THE PEACOCK OF JEWELS."

THE name of Fergus Hume instantly recalls stories of mystery, of baffling crimes and of thrilling adventure, so that it is not surprising that his latest effort, "The Peacock of Jewels," should open with the discovery of a most puzzling murder and close with its solution in a way the reader is not even led to suspect. In the telling of the narrative, the crime is fixed with seeming certainty on a number of characters of Hume's creation only to find they are guiltless. Suspicion points in one direction after another, only to be dissipated and in the end the real culprit is disclosed and the motive is brought forth.

There may be some who will question the soundness of this motive and its adaptability to real life. Sometimes it is hard to conceive that a murderer would kill, to save his victim from being punished for another crime. It seems to be rather heroic measures to adopt, yet this apparent discrepancy does not seriously mar the story. If the reader is willing to accept it in the same spirit as did the person who was told that "the way to cure a corn is to cut off the toe," then there need be nothing in the way of a complete enjoyment of the story.

HUDSON MAXIM.

A golden peacock, in whose jeweled tail was traced a clew to the hiding place of a great legacy, supplies the name for the story and an interesting feature around which the mystery revolves. Interwoven in this is all the elements—love, adventure, fortune hunting and baffling crime—which go to make up an engaging narrative are interjected by Mr. Hume with even a greater degree of success than his "The Mystery of a Hansom Cab." (G. W. Dillingham & Co., New York.)

"THE SCIENCE OF POETRY."

AS a many-sided man, Hudson Maxim used his opportunuity between 1900 and 1910 to introduce a new department of eloquence. He became the orator of the aeroplane and of scientific aeronautics in general, while at the same time he was developing the Maxim "silencer" for rifles in the wars of the future. Finding out many inventions, dealing with dynamics, including high explosives, he now reveals other activities, before unsuspected, as the author of the latest work on "The Science of Poetry and the Philosophy of Language."

It is a remarkable book, in which its author purposes to give every reader a means of deciding what poetry is and what it is not, regardless of opinions held either by critics or by poets themselves. The standard offered is that of science beginning to investigate the laws of poetry as its expression becomes audible in sound. This connects in natural law with the investigations the author made in discovering his "silencer" for the noise of guns.

It is clear from his investigation that all sounds are divided into two main classes, one of which is noise. This establishes the scientific method of deciding what is not poetry. It cannot be poetry if it is noise, because noise is the result of an "irregular succession of sounds, shocks."

The irregularity is due to a lack of measurement in the time between the successive shocks. Hence if the sounds in which ideas are expressed through language have no measurement, no regularity and are in fact nothing but the irregular succession of sonorous shocks, they are not poems, but noises. This is a very clear demonstration, so fully scientific that it applies to perhaps 80 per cent of the contents of all "poetical works" in most modern languages. Mistaken for poems by their authors and by some critics, these irregular sonorous shocks now call for the Maxim Silencer.

Successful in making the nature of unpoetical noises clear in a few terse sentences, Mr. Maxim devotes the rest of the volume to explaining the nature of real poetry. The best work of great poets in all ages is illustrated by examples of his own, made possible by his knowledge of scientific principles.

Before anyone can grasp these, the entire volume must be studied and the principles defined applied to practice, in a way which will avoid the production of noises. Poetry, as Mr. Maxim defines it, is "the expression of insensuous thought in sensuous terms by artistic trope." "Artistic trope" converts what might otherwise be noise into measured sound charged with ideas. What some call genius and others inspiration may convert measured sound into the "music of language." Mr. Maxim offers valuable suggestions of what this means. He almost lets us into the great secret of music, known to such a poet as Gray, when, in his "Elgy," he converts what some might turn to mere noise into the highest music of the English language. In trying to find how Gray succeeded in doing this, nearly all have looked only at his "meter" or measuring scale. Mr. Maxim begins looking into the result to find what Gray measured with his scale and how he did it. Putting ideas into sound and measuring sound into melody, Gray's results differ exceedingly from all the "irregular succession of sonorous shocks," mistaken by some critics for poetry. As Mr. Maxim exposes critics whose ideas of poetry belong to their sense of noise, they may disapprove him greatly. But he has certainly made the first systematic attempt in the history of literature to apply the principles of modern science so that there will be established a clear line of division between all poetry and all noise. (Funk & Wagnalls, New York.)

A COLLECTION OF NOTES.

UNDER the title: "Confidence or National Suicide," Mr. Arthur E. Stilwell has published what he himself describes as "a collection of notes." They are designed "to call attention to problems which are confronting the people of our country today, and which are threatening peril to American railways."

The notes are divided into three classes; the first dealing with "conditions," the second with "errors," and the third with "remedies." From first to last the book is a plea for business interests, and especially for railroad interests. The author desires for America a President like Diaz and an administration like his. He says: "If the people of the United States would elect as President a great business man, such as the late Marshall Field or Andrew Carnegie, I think it would be found that such a business mind would be a valuable asset to the nation. Why do we not elect a business man to the Presidency?"

Comment is useless.

"Confidence or National Suicide." Arthur Edward Stilwell. The Bankers Publishing Co., New York).

A BOOK OF SERMONS.

UNDER the title, "Behind the World and Beyond," Henry A. Stimson, D. D., of New York City, has issued a volume of 25 sermons delivered from his own pulpit, that of Manhattan Congregational Church. This is the fifth volume of sermons Dr. Stimson has published, and those who have read his former ones will be glad of the opportunity to read this. It evinces the ripened strength of a man who has grown mentally and spiritually with the years, who is not blind to the tendencies of the age, yet who, through all, has never lost faith in the ultimate triumph of the Kingdom of God.

The volume throughout is marked by profound thought, yet so simply and clearly expressed that the argument can be followed and the sermon enjoyed by the average reader. Taken as a whole, the book is directed both to the head and the heart, and should add much to the author's reputation as a scholarly yet popular preacher.

Dr. Stimson was from 1886 to 1892 pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church, St. Louis. It was his custom to devote one Sunday evening in every month to some subject connected with civic betterment. In New York his pulpit has frequently been occupied by candidates for local office who were pledged to municipal righteousness. Although the sermons deal primarily with things spiritual rather than material, it is clear that the preacher's sympathy with the workaday world has helped him to present his message in a manner which will win the attention of many whom the ordinary pulpit utterance does not interest.

"Behind the World and Beyond," published by Eaton & Mains, New York.

"NOTED MEN AND WOMEN."

"NOTED Men and Women" is the title of a brightly entertaining volume in which James W. Morrissey, for many years one of the best-known theatrical managers in this country, gives the reading public his reminiscences of famous folk with whom he has been associated.

Players and singers are vastly in the majority of Mr. Morrissey's marshaling of celebrities from the dim shades of the past, and his personal recollections go far enough back to include Adelaide Ristori, Mary Anderson, Christine Nilsson, Parepa-Rosa, Fanny Davenport, Edwin Booth and others long vanished from the world's stage. He tells many anecdotes, mainly in an amusing vein, one of his stories relating how 'Gene Field, the poet, came as Mlle. Rhea's press agent from Chicago to St. Louis, genially winning much "advance space" favor for his star from the St. Louis newspapers of that time, and other lightly illuminative recitals make good reading for a leisure hour.

In addition to his memories of great dramatic and operatic stars, however, Mr. Morrissey has known many other celebrities, a number of whom appear in the pages of his distinctly valuable little book. Among them are Charles Dickens, Samuel F. B. Morse, Jay Gould, "Jim" Fiske, Horace Greeley, Gens. Sherman, Sheridan and Ben Butler, Charles A. Dana, Dom Pedro of Brazil, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and others similarly worth while. His book is dedicated to the men and women of whom he writes. (Kiebold Press, New York.)

"THE HOUSE ON STILTS."

THE publishers say of H. R. Hazard's story, "The House on Stilts:" "Since Rider Haggard wrote 'King Solomon's Mines' no writer of imaginary fiction has produced a purely fantastic story, so convincing in every detail, so powerful, so original."

And there are a few Americans who talk English that is as stilted as the house that gives the book its title. Take the dialogue at random and you find such phrases as this:

"How can I help believing after witnessing some of the awful things that woman has done. She is believed to have killed the last American Consul—my father's predecessor."

"Horrible!" I cried. "Tell me more about her."

"Not now," she said. "Before you have been here long you will learn more about Joan of Lazarre, as she calls herself, than you will care to know."

To the reader who likes dime novels, who is not annoyed by words put in merely to fill space, who can enjoy banal conversation and is willing to be thrilled by plain lies of the "horrible, horrible!" type, the book will afford an hour's amusement. To those who have a higher taste it will be a bore. (G. W. Dillingham Co.)

AKRON RECRUIT SHOWS WELL IN FIRST WORKOUT

"Red" Nelson Twirls Winning Ball in Debut as a Brownie Against Sox.

Brownie Recruit Has Record for Throwing Out Men at the Plate

MONMOUTH, Ill., Sept. 10.

OUTFIELDER GUS WILLIAMS of the Monmouth (Illinois-Missouri League) team, who is the property of the St. Louis Browns, will continue playing with the local club until the season closes, Sept. 18, and will then leave to report to Manager O'Connor. He has been performing in right field and has hit near the .300 mark all season.

He is recognized as one of the most dangerous batters in the League with men on bases. He is fast for a big man and keeps himself in good condition. Williams has tossed out more men at the plate than any other outfielder in the League.

"Red" Nelson, the right-hander from the Akron (O. and P. League) team, followed Jim McDonald of Shreveport and "Red" Corriden of Omaha in making a hit with Sportsman's Park fans Friday. The three newcomers in as many days have taken turns in performing in flashy form.

Nelson was one of the pitching sensations of the Ohio and Pennsylvania League season. He was credited with winning the pennant for the Akron team, and topped his season's stellar work by twirling some half-dozen games in the last 10 days of the campaign.

Nelson is a short, stockily built fellow, with a good pair of shoulders. He possesses lots of speed, a good curve ball and, best of all, seems to have the courage necessary for a tip-top twirler.

Graham Big and Fast.

O'Connor also showed Graham, the infielder from the Jackson (Cotton States League) team. Graham replaced Truesdale at second base. He's a big fellow, who has a nice position at the bat and seems capable of poling out a good number of long hits. As said in advance by Scout Harry Howell, who recommended Graham's purchase, the newcomer still needs a little polishing in a fielding way. He's almost as big as Dudley Criss, but is much faster than that individual.

Jim McDonald, who, because of St. Louis water, was forced to lay off Thursday, reported himself O K and lined up at third base. His one-day illness left him minus much of his dash and pepper that he is said to possess.

Anyway, O'Connor's bunch of juveniles pleased. Pitchers Malloy and Mitchell and Outfielder Northen of the Houston (Texas League) team reported. It was O'Connor's intention to insert Northen in Friday's games, but the latter begged to be excused for a day because he had been riding continuously for 86 hours. He makes his debut in center field in Saturday's games.

Youngsters Work Sunday.

Hall, another Howell capture, from the Joplin (Western Association) team, will work in one of the games. Barney Pelty will likely be used in another.

It is O'Connor's plan to pitch Malloy and Mitchell in Sunday's double attraction with the Naps of Cleveland, unless he uses Mitchell in one of Saturday's games instead of Pelty.

"Lefty" George of the Indianapolis (American Association) team failed to report. O'Connor says he doesn't expect Outfielder Murray of the St. Paul (American Association) team, until the season in the Association ends.

TWO-BALL FOURSOME FOR SIPPLE CUP IS ON TODAY

Members of Normandie Golf Club will play a two-ball foursome tournament Saturday afternoon for the W. C. Sipple Jr. cups. This handsome pair of trophies was donated by Mr. Sipple last spring, but at that time it was felt that there was not sufficient interest taken in the two-ball foursome play to warrant putting up such a fine prize. Since then, however, interest in this form of play has greatly increased and the tournament today has created much enthusiasm.

Next Saturday, Sept. 17, the qualifying round for the regular fall club championship tournament starts at 1 o'clock. Sixteen players will qualify in each class, Championship, A, B and C. U. S. Golf Association rules govern both contests.

AMERICAN FIGHTERS SAIL FOR LAND OF KANGAROO

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 10.—The company of prize fighters that Hugh McIntosh is leading to Australia sailed yesterday on the Zealand. The party comprises Billy Papke, Jimmy Clabby, Ray Bronson and Johnny Thompson.

Willis Corbett, the veteran Australian fight critic, is returning with the contingent. Thomas S. Andrews, a Milwaukee sporting editor, is with the party as manager. Thompson and Papke intend to return to America via England, and it is likely the other members of the party will go to London with them.

Kate Storm Wins Field Trial.

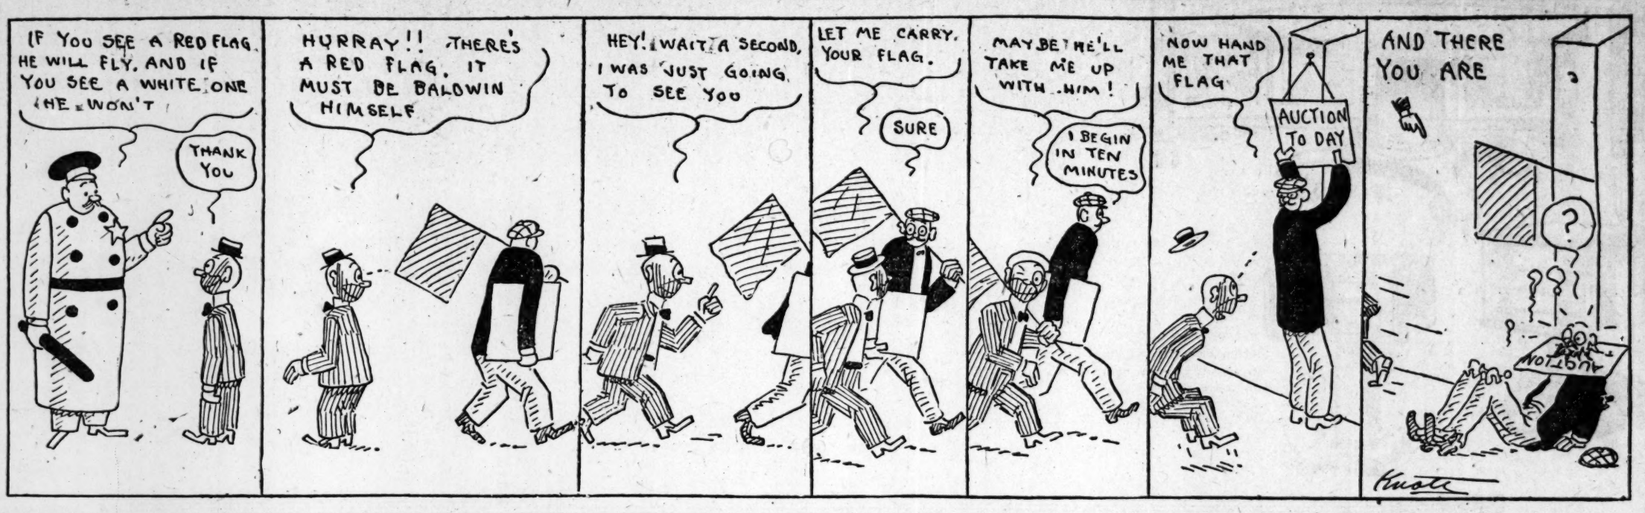

WINNIPEG, Man., Sept. 10.—The derby of the field trials was completed yesterday. The award was one of the hardest the judges have had to make, and 10 animals were sent into the second class.

First place in the derby went to Kate Storm, owned by J. W. Considine of Seattle; second to Arrawanna, owned by Albert Fletcher of Washington, Va., and third was divided between Bill Draws, owned by Wall of Winnepeg, and No Money, owned by J. K. Avent of Hickory Valley, Tenn.

The championship opens today with at least eight entries.

AND THERE YOU ARE!

WRAY'S COLUMN

ONE can find excuse for signing away a birthright for a mess of pottage—if the stomach be in a sufficiently mandatory mood. There are times when a meal in the stomach looms larger than an inheritance in prospect. But the world looks in amazement on such a man as Harry Sallee, who tosses away fame and fortune for a can of beer—or for a few of them, at least.

Here is the greatest left-hand pitcher in the National League—at least, Bresnahan says he is—at the age of 24 so depleted in standing and moral spirit that he is content to talk of twirling for Heine Kulage against the Logan Squares, running the risk of obliterating himself for all time from organized baseball. For $25 he is apparently willing to jeopardize a possible $5000 or more a season.

Can you beat it?

A Checkered Career.

Sallee has done some stunts in his time. Besides being president of the Can-Rushers' Club, he has cried cantaloupes as a huckster; has bandied the festive milk bottle on back porches at 3 a. m. for a dairy concern; has traveled on the hobo's Pullman—the brakebeam—and otherwise conducted himself like a man in urgent want of a case note. And all because he could not stick to his last—or would not, which is the more probable.

Baseball history notes a few others of Sallee's like—"Rube" Waddell and "Bugs" Raymond are perhaps the most notable examples. If Sallee would read as he runs downhill he might know his finish. Raymond is down and out, with no resources save pickups, and a family on his hands. Waddell has landed in the minor leagues with nothing but a lot of unpleasant memories and the cheering thought that his earning power is nearly all in.

Sallee's friends will of course not let him do as Kulage wants him to—pitch against the Logan Squares. And after preventing him from committing this act of folly a committee should be appointed to see that a competent surgeon rearranges some of the displaced bones in his top story. Perhaps then he would realize that he is depriving the baseball community of some first-class pitching and himself of at least $50,000 in salary for 10 years' services.

Going down—"Phenom" Meloan. We just missed him.

THE Athletics are out to win over 100 games this season, and unless something drops they will do it to a certainty. After winning three straight from the Speed Boys of Boston Saturday morning, Connie Mack found his standing was 88—40—.688. This leaves 26 more games to complete the 154 scheduled. Thus the Mackmen can beat the 100 mark by winning 13 games, which is a percentage of .500 for the remainder of the season. A new American League record is in sight for the White Elephants.

Would You Pitch Cole?

KNOWING the importance of winning the first game of a seven-contest series, Frank Chance finds himself in a quandary as to what pitcher to use in the opening battle. Undoubtedly the first question the Peerless leader put to himself was: Shall I use Cole at the outset It's 10 to 1 he has decided not to, although that pitcher has shown the best form of any of the Cub twirlers. And the reason will be, of course, the greater experience and judgment of the time-tried veterans of his staff.

But Cole is veteran enough, after his experience throughout an entire season in the big league, and the young man seems to be preferable to either Brown or Ruelbach, neither of whom has been invincible, as of old, this season.

It's almost a sure thing that Miner Brown will face Bender in the first battle of the world's series. But here's one time that the "veteran" dope might safely be side-tracked by Chance.

Ban Johnson, president of the American League, is very much interested in good roads. He might interest himself further by finding an easier one to the pennant for the Browns to follow. It's awfully dusty back here in eighth place, just now.

It's Up to the Students.

A MEETING of the principals of the four St. Louis high schools will be held next week to decide the fate of interscholastic football. There is every chance of a deadlock, as two of the principals are for and two against the proposition to continue league contests between the institutional teams. What will happen after that is not known, unless each school goes its individual way as it deems best.

The great argument against the game, in reality, is not the injuries that may result from continuing the sport, but the damage that is said to be done to the scholastic standing of some of the pupils, as well as the general distraction of interest from school work during the season.

The matter is therefore more or less up to the students themselves. If they desire to retain the game ardently enough to make a few sacrifices, their scholastic standing need not suffer. It is not at all inconsistent with good scholarship to play football.

WALSH, AT HIS BEST HOLDS BOSS HEDGES' MEN HELPLESS, IN FIRST

Big Ed Walsh had the better of Bob Ray in the opener of Friday's double attraction between the Browns and the White Sox of Chicago, and the Windy City outfit won, 8—1. But "Red" Nelson, the Akron (O. and P. League) recruit, outpitched Guy Harris White, M. D., twirler and song writer, in the concluding show and the O'Connorites landed on top, 5—2.

Walsh held the Brownies to two hits in the curtain raiser. One was a Texas Leaguer. The big spitter also struck out eight batters and walked three. He was in good form and but for an error by Third Baseman Lord would have blanked the Browns.

Ray couldn't fool the Sox. He was pounded for 11 safe drives. They were well mixed with the six passes he issued and the five errors turned behind him.

Three runs were dashed off by the Sox in the third. With French a goner, Zeider and Lord got scratch infield singles. Meloan bounced a double off Graham's shins and Capt. Rollie tallied. Collins followed with a single to left and Lord and Meloan came over.

The Browns got their lone tally in this section. Walsh passed McDonald and Killefer and when Ray bunted, Lord dropped Walsh's throw at third. That filled the bases with none gone. Walsh also passed Graham and McDonald was forced over. Corriden, Stone and Newnam were easy.

The Sox tally was raised to five in the seventh on a double by Lord, Meloan's single and errors by Newnam, McDonald and Killefer. Tannehill's pass, Block's single, Corriden's wide throw of Walsh's grounder and Zeider's double gave the Sox three more in the eighth.

Nelson started off badly in the opening round of the second game, due to an error by McDonald. He hit French, the first batter to face him, but helped retire Zeider. Stephens had French pilfering third, but McDonald dropped the throw. Then Lord squeezed French home, the latter tallying while Nelson tossed out Lord.

The Browns took the lead in the second. Hartzell and Schweitzer got infield singles, but McDonald popped to White, trying to sacrifice. Stephens' infield scratch filled the bases. Nelson rolled to French and Hartzell tallied. Then Graham hit a long double to right and Schweitzer and Stephens tallied.

Tannehill's single and Sullivan's long double, both hits to left, gave the Sox their second run in the fourth session.

The Browns hopped onto Dr. White in the eighth for two more. Newnam opened with a single and after being sacrificed to second by Hartzell, pilfered third. Schweitzer scored him with a single and later swiped second. McDonald reached first on a fielder's choice, while Schweitzer registered when Stephens forced McDonald.

Neither Hit Nor Run Allowed by Pitcher in This Double Bill

BESSEMER, Mich., Sept. 10.

STRIKING out more than a score of batters and keeping his opponents helpless for two games, Pitcher Tucker of the local league team is believed to have established a precedent in baseball, by winning both ends of a double header without a hit or run. Tucker gave several bases on balls, but nothing resembling a hit was secured off his delivery.

M'FARLAND AND WOLGAST MATCHED FOR TEN ROUNDS

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 10.—Lightweight Champion Ad Wolgast of Cadillac, Mich., and "Packy" McFarland of Chicago were yesterday matched to meet in Milwaukee on Sept. 30, at the Milwaukee baseball park, in a 10-round, no-decision bout. The boys are to weigh 133 pounds at 5 o'clock on the afternoon of the contest.

Drew and Cook at Handball.

Harry Cook, manager of the Business Men's Gymnasium, and Oliver Drew, who claims the handball championship of the world, will clash in a special handball match on the Louisiana Hall court Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Last Monday Cook won a decisive match over Drew on the Business Men's Gymnasium court.

White Defeats Redmond.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 10.—Frankie White of Chicago had a shade over Jack Redmond of Milwaukee in a 10-round, no-decision boxing contest last night. The boys weighed 138 pounds and were strong at the finish.

TRIPLE A TENNIS EVENT REACHES FINAL SATURDAY

The Triple A Club championship in tennis has reached the semi-final round and the four players now remaining in the tournament will play off their matches both in the semi-finals and finals today. The semi-final matches are: Mel Smithers vs. Ed Serrano and J. Hercules vs. H. Small. The finals in the golf club championship will be played Sunday. The two contestants are Carl Piepho and W. L. Whipple.

BEDWELL PLANS TO RACE STABLE IN CALIFORNIA

Turfman, Ruled Off, Will Make No Further Efforts to Be Reinstated.

CHICAOG, Sept. 10.—H. G. Bedwell is making preparations at Latonia to ship his $75,000 stable of 20 racehorses, recently ruled off the track by the Kentucky State Racing Commission, to Emeryville, Cal. Bedwell declares that he will not attempt to seek relief in the courts and that he will not make further efforts to secure a modification of the Kentucky commission's ruling against him. He said today:

"I will ship my horses from Latonia to California, and if I cannot race them there, will dispose of them in some way that will not make them an entire loss to me. I will find something profitable to do in another line if I am to be denied the privilege of racing. I have had heavy expense in having my horses stand idle these seven weeks, but I am not broke. I have saved a considerable sum of the money I made on the turf."

The members of the Kentucky State Racing Commission are said to be convinced that Nadzu was drugged at Latonia, July 4, at the direction of Bedwell, and they seem to hold the opinion that he has for some time resorted to the scientific administration of stimulants.

The commission has placed absolutely no reliance in the affidavit of the negro groom, Kiel Williams, whom Bedwell charged with doping Nadzu unknown to him. The members argue that if he could have been brought to drug a horse as claimed he could be bought to swear to a lie.

Hamilton Young was the only member of the commission of five in favor of sanctioning a sale of the Bedwell horses and he argued with his colleagues for action in that direction, but was overruled.

BEST ST. LOUIS PLAYERS TO ENTER CITY TOURNEY

Entry blanks for the St. Louis city championship tennis tournament, which starts on the Triple A courts in Forest Park Saturday, Sept. 17, can now be had on application to Secretary Ross of that club. The titles in both singles and doubles are to be played for and the event will be open to entries from any part of the country. Guy Oliver, who won the title last year, will have to travel at a great pace to win it again this year from such a field as will probably be competing. Among the seekers for the title this season will probably be such players as Drummond Jones, Roland Hoerr, Clarence Gamble, Arthur Wear, Joe Dickson, Mel Smithers, Elmer Adkins and Walter Crunden of Peoria, Ill.

DIXIE KID HAS WILLIE LEWIS ON QUEER STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The Dixie Kid, a negro welterweight, gave a severe beating to Willie Lewis last night at the National Sporting Club of America, and put a heavy crimp into his championship aspirations. The tide of battle ebbed and flowed backward and forward in the early stages of the 10-round bout, but it turned to the negro toward the close, and at the bell Lewis was staggering and groggy.

TED COY AND CAYOU TO WRITE FOOTBALL FOR POST-DISPATCH

NEW football and what it means, is a topic interesting every college and school athlete in the country at present. The Post-Dispatch will endeavor to throw light on the subject in a series of articles beginning Sunday, by Francis M. Cayou, Washington University's football coach, and the man whose wits helped Wabash beat the famous machine of St. Louis University when Edward B. Cochems was at his zenith.

In addition to Cayou's articles, Ted Coy, Yale '10, whom Walter Camp declared to be the greatest player of all time, will write of the new game and its effect on the development of the big university teams of the East. Coy this year is at the head of Yale's coaching staff.

MILER PAULL TO QUIT ATHLETICS

Intercollegiate Champion Made Wonderful Time of 4:17 4-5 in Mile Run.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Wilton Paull, who holds the intercollegiate record for the mile run, is to retire from the track this fall. He completed his four years of undergraduate work at the University of Pennsylvania, last fall, and since has been competing under the banner of the New York Athletic Club.

"I have come to the conclusion," he says, "that I cannot be successful as an athlete and at the same time attend properly to my profession. I expect to practice dentistry in Buffalo, my home town, and the track will never see me again in active competition."

To college men Paull is the greatest miler the world has ever known. Experts who saw him hang up the intercollegiate record of 4:17 4-5, at the Harvard Stadium, two years ago, picked him as the fastest miler of the age and predicted that he would eventually make a world's record of 4m. 10s.

COACH BENDER POSTPONES INAUGURAL FOOTBALL WORK

Coach Bender announced Saturday morning that he would not call out the St. Louis University football candidates for their inaugural practice until Monday afternoon. He had planned to give the players in town a light workout Saturday afternoon, but because of a baseball game on the St. Louis U. campus a postponement was necessary.

Greve Matched With Heskett.

Greve and Heskett clash in the junior straight-rail billiard tournament at Peterson's Saturday night. In Friday night's match Phelan lost to Sullivan, 60—51.

LOGAN SQUARES HERE FOR GAMES

Crack Chicago Semi-Professionals to Play Three Contests With Hyde Parks.

The Logan Squares of the Chicago City League, managed by Jimmy Callahan, the former leader of the White Sox of Chicago, arrived Saturday morning for a three-game series with the Hyde Parks, champions of the Trolley League, at Kulage Park. A single game will be played Saturday afternoon.

Manager Callahan said he would probably pitch "Chick" Fraser, the former twirler of the Cubs of Chicago. Manager Kulage of the Hyde Parks will use Eugene Dale, a St. Louis boy, who helped to win the Texas League pennant for the Dallas team.

The Logan Squares and Hyde Parks will play a double-header Sunday. Efforts were made by members of the Hyde Parks to have Harry Sallee of the Cardinals twirl one of the games, but it is said that some of Sallee's friends persuaded him not to consent, as it would cause him to lose his standing in organized baseball if he lined up with the semi-pros, who are regarded as "outlaws." Joe Bernard will pitch one of Sunday's games for the Hyde Parks.

MATTY'S STOMACH TROUBLE JUST A LITTLE MISTEAK

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—"On the level," said Matty Mathewson after the game as he puffed at a Turkish cigarette, "I wish you fellows would cut out this stuff about my having stomach trouble. Believe me, the only trouble I have is in getting steaks big enough to fill it. When I lose you may attribute it to the arm or the head, but the stomach—never!" McGraw has decided to keep Matty for next season.

JOHNSON HAS SPEED, BUT NOT CURVES OF RUSIE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The relative speed of Walter Johnson of the Senators and other pitchers, was under much discussion after the game. Jack Quinn of the Hilltops had considerable speed, and there was some doubt as to whether Johnson showed any more speed than did Quinn. Lou Criger, who has been catching in the big leagues about fifteen years, thinks that Johnson has remarkable speed, and is about as fast as Amos Rusie used to be, but lacks the curves that Rusie had. "I believe that Johnson has as much speed as Rusie had, but he is a comparatively green pitcher yet, and needs to learn a lot of tricks with a change of pace that a pitcher acquires only with practice before he will be as good as Rusie was."

EBB-TIDE "JINKS" RUINS CHAMPION SHERIDAN'S FORM

Martin Sheridan, the allround champion of 1909, has the queerest of all "jinks."

"When the tide is out at Travers I can never throw the discus up to my true form," says Martin. "If the tide is coming in it isn't so bad, but when the water is receding it draws all a fellow's strength along with it."

Sheridan says that a scientist explained to him just how the tide affects one's strength and that he found the scientist's theory was correct the very first time he competed near the salt water.

Orphans vs. Jefferson City Team.

The Orphan Boys will play the Jefferson City team at South End Park Sunday afternoon. The visitors have won 22 out of 28 games played this year. Patton and Franke will be the Orphans' battery.

Two More Double-Headers.

The Browns and White Sox of Chicago play the final double-header of their series of four at Sportsman's Park Saturday afternoon, commencing at 2 o'clock. The Nops of Cleveland and Browns clash in a double-header Sunday.

FLETCHER MAKES KONEY AN OFFER OF $10,000 BONUS

But It's 1000 to 1 He'll Never Have a Chance to Make Good.

EVERS FALLS FOR THAT D. A. FLETCHER CONTRACT

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.

THAT several of the Chicago National League players intend to go through with the series of games between all-star teams selected from the National and American leagues after the world's series is over, despite the ban placed on such contests by the National Commission, was stated yesterday by Johnny Evers, second baseman of the Cubs. Evers says he has a contract with D. A. Fletcher, the promoter, for $500 for his appearance in 10 games.

According to Evers, four other members of the Chicago Nationals have similar contracts with Fletcher.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 10.

ROGER BRESNAHAN'S men arrived in the baseball capital of the United States, yesterday, in time to get the glad hand from "Teddy" Roosevelt, who among other things told Brownie Burke, the Red's mascot, in the presence of several ball p'ayers at the Ohio Valley Exposition that "baseball is a bully good game."

"What should the Reds do to win?" Teddy was asked.

"Hit the ball on the nose and hustle," was the reply.

Some of the Cardinals who have slumped in their batting this season are taking the gracious advice to heart.

Sir Roger himself wasn't in town to greet the mighty lion hunter. He arrived this morning and will take charge of the Cards on the field this afternoon.

Fletcher Still Active.

D. A. Fletcher, the disappointed promoter of the all-star tour which was squelched by the National Commission, visited several of the St. Louis players at the Hotel Havlin and talked over plans for the new league which he is organizing. He talked with Koney and Huggins and informed them that he has $3,000,000 backing for the venture and that the league will be a sure go.

Fletcher says he has secured an option on a site for a park in the exclusive Walnut Hill district.

The promoter sounded the players as to their willingness to join the movement, but they wouldn't make him any promises. As one of the stars of the profession, Fletcher intimated that he would give Koney $10,000 bonus and a five years contract to sign in case the league materialized.

Ballplayers are in revolt against the action of the club owners hiding behind the supreme court of baseball in stopping barnstorming. They want a chance to earn extra money after the regular season closes.

Promoter Just a Joke.

Cincinnati baseball men are not taking Fletcher seriously, but they admit that the time is not far distant when there will be two major league clubs in Cincinnati. The project is in the air and will be an assured fact within three years.

Of course, a large delegation of Miller Huggins' friends will be on hand this afternoon to watch the diamond contortions of their favorite. On this season's form, "Hug" is a more valuable ballplayer than Dick Egan, the Cincinnati second baseman. Miller is outhitting, outfielding and outrunning the California boy who crowded him off the team.

RHEUMATISM

PURIFYING THE BLOOD THE ONLY PERMANENT CURE

No case of Rheumatism was ever cured except by a thorough purification of the blood; just as long as the blood remains charged with fermenting uric acid poison, the painful disease will continue. The pains and aches of Rheumatism are simply superficial effects of the impurities in the circulation, and sometimes may be temporarily relieved by the application of plasters, liniments, hot cloths, etc. But the person who trifles with this dangerous disease by depending on local treatment alone, is certain to pay for the mistake with constant suffering later on. S. S. S. cures Rheumatism in the only way it is possible to cure the disease. It goes down into the blood, and removes the uric acid from the circulation, so that the nerves, bones, muscles and joints are lubricated and fed with nourishing elements instead of being continually irritated and inflamed with the sharp, uratic impurity. Then when S. S. S. has cleansed and purified the blood, the pains and aches cease, all inflammation disappears, stiffened muscles are made pliant, and every troublesome symptom of Rheumatism is permanently corrected. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice free to all who write.

THE POST-DISPATCH DAILY RECORD OF MARKETS AND FINANCE

STOCK EXCHANGE DEALS DROP TO LOWEST RECORD

Fewer Transactions Made in New York Saturday Than Any Day in Six Years.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"The only interesting aspect of today's stock market was the remarkably low figure to which the total of transactions fell. Not since 1904 has business on the Stock Exchange been numerically so small, and it is not easy to match it, in the way of "low records," during the preceding decade. Nothing of any importance occurred in the day's movement of prices; stocks, as a rule, closed pretty much where they opened."

"Such interest as existed in the financial markets today had to do with the Steel Corporation's monthly showing of orders on hand and with the weekly bank statement. Both were given out after the Stock Exchange had closed.

"The 'unfilled orders' showing was a little worse than expected. Current estimates had foreshadowed a shrinkage of 800,000 tons during August; the actual decrease turns out to be 433,800, which is larger by 145,000 tons than the decrease of July.

"The bank statement showed wide discrepancy between 'average' and 'actual' figures, but that merely corrected the still wider discrepancy of last Saturday. The week-end showing reported no such loss in reserves as that of a week ago, but it showed a reduction in cash holdings of $4,400,000, which was considerably above yesterday's expectations and which cut down surplus reserves $3,700,000."

DETAILED REPORT OF THE DAY'S TRADING ON WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—St. Paul showed an opening advance today of ¾, and International Paper preferred and Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis a decline of 1. Only about a score of stocks was traded in and there was no other change in excess of a half. The ticker came practically to a standstill after the first few minutes.

BEAR TRADERS AGAIN DEPRESS GRAIN VALUES

Wheat Scores Low Record on Movement—Corn Also Weak.

Wheat continued its downward flight at the short session today, touching new low records on the movement and closing under considerable selling pressure from both longs and shorts.

The failure of export demands to develop, weak foreign markets, continued piling up of stocks at primary points, estimated record breaking world's shipments and a bearish sentiment among the professionals, were depressing influences.

Corn was under pressure as well as wheat, the predicted frosts over the growing belt again failing to materialize, while the improving crop outlook and heavy yield indicated by the Government report, is causing farmers to market their supplies of old grain freely.

Exports of corn reported of 650,000 bu, were without effect on sentiment, the trade not forgetting the recent talk of exports in wheat, which held the market up in face of bearish conditions, only to see the report prove exaggerated, and the bottom suddenly drop out of the market. Oats reflected the selling pressure in other grains.

The early Liverpool market was steady on late American cables and only a small portion of world's shipments taken for the United Kingdom. Later pressure developed on lower spot prices and a break in continental markets.

Liverpool wheat futures closed ¼d lower, corn unchanged to ⅛d lower. Antwerp wheat futures closed ⅝d lower, Budapest 2½c higher and Berlin 1⅝c lower.

Local wheat receipts today, 97,569 bu, of which 342 sacks 64 cars local, 24 through; last year, 104,523 bu, or 677 sacks 98 cars local, 5 through.

Duluth today received 123 cars of wheat, against 284 last week and 471 last year.

Minneapolis cars of wheat today totaled 412, against 429 last week and 470 last year. Weekly receipts at Minneapolis and Duluth were 3400 cars, against 3857 last week and 5332 last year.

Winnipeg cars wheat today 186, against 214 last year. Weekly receipts 812 cars, against 1049 last week and 1522 last year.

Total primary receipts of wheat today, 1,228,062 bu, against 1,879,865 bu last year; shipments, 342,930 bu, against 720,255 bu last year.

Local corn receipts today, 43,265 bu, or 26 sacks, 29 cars local, 7 through; last year, 33,128 bu, or 50 sacks, 22 cars local, 8 cars through.

Local oats receipts today, 85,000 bu, or 39 cars local, 11 through; last year, 52,800 bu, or 32 cars local, 1 car through.

Clearances of wheat and flour, 321,000 bu; of corn, 39,000 bu; of oats, 2000 bu.

Cash corn ½@1c lower in sympathy with futures; demand light, mostly local buyers.

Cash oats also lower in sympathy with corn. Only local buyers in the market and orders scarce.

HOGS.—A small supply of hogs was received and the market averaged a dime higher and are now getting back close to the high point of the week. The bulk of the hogs sold from $9.70@9.90. It was a good, active market and the offerings were well cleaned up early in the day. Packers purchased a fair proportion of the offerings at $9.25@9.50 for the heavies, and $9.60@9.85 for medium weights. Most of the good light and medium weights to the shippers and butchers brought $9.85@10. The market closed on a firm basis. None of the buyers secured more than half of the number of hogs really wanted.

SHEEP.—There was no sheep market from the fact that there were no sheep on sale. The offerings were well cleaned up Friday and none arrived since the Friday market closed. The week closes on a strong basis, with best lambs worth $6.25@6.85 good fat mutton sheep $4.25@4.35, breeding ewes $4.75@5.25, stockers $3@4, and bucks $3.

HORSES AND MULES.—After a very active week the horse market lapsed into its usual inactive state always assumed on Saturday. There are no horses left in first hands and the dealers are also fairly well cleaned up of their week's offerings. There were no fresh receipts in first hands during the day. The mule trade was very quiet and inactive throughout the day. Buyers were scarce and few sales were reported. There were no fresh receipts in first hands for the day.

COTTON MARKET LOWER ON WEATHER AND BEAR PRESSURE

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—The cotton market opened steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 3 points, near months being relatively firm in sympathy with the cables and reports of a steadier Southern spot situation.

After the opening prices eased off to last night's finals, on September, and a net loss of 5@7 points under scattering liquidation and bear pressure, encouraged by the better weather outlook for over Sunday, rumors of labor difficulties in Manchester and reiterated reports of domestic mill curtailment.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 10.—Closing: Cotton, spot dull; prices 22 points higher; American middling fair, 8.77d; good middling, 8.41d; middling, 8.25d; low middling, 8.05d; good ordinary, 7.79d; ordinary, 7.54d. The sales of the day were 3000 bales, of which 100 were for speculation and export, and included 1700 American; receipts, none.

Futures opened barely steady and closed steady; Sept., 7.91d; Sept.-Oct., 7.18½d; Oct.-Nov., 6.97½d; Nov.-Dec., 6.91d; Dec.-Jan., 6.88d; Jan.-Feb., 6.87½d; Feb.-March, 6.87½d; March-April, 6.88d; April-May, 6.88d; May-June, 6.88½d.

Buy High-Grade Bonds Now

General indications, however, developing during the past week point to greater activity and higher prices in the immediate future.

For example: R. G. Dun and Company, the Mercantile Agency, in their weekly financial review say:

"The movement in most departments of trade and industry is indicative of increased confidence and higher activity as the Fall season draws near. The week's improvement in iron and steel is indeed quite noticeable. The heavier demand for pig iron being especially proof of improved conditions."

Security 6 to 1

We have purchased recently an issue of $104,000.00 East St. Louis Street Improvement Bonds.

Everybody knows the worth of these Bonds. They are a first lien on residence property worth SIX TIMES the amount of the issue.

These Bonds are in $500.00 denominations and at the price we can offer them afford an excellent investment opportunity.

Further information about these and several others equally attractive, also 5½ per cent and 6 per cent First Deeds of Trust, may be had by writing or visiting this Department.

Lost and Found

IF YOU LOSE ANYTHING, and will advertise it here, you will surely recover it if found by an honest person. A 3-Time Ad seldom fails. Remarkable recoveries are brought about every day through this column. Your druggist our agent.

IF YOU FIND ANYTHING, bring it to the Post-Dispatch Lost and Found Bureau, 210-212 North Broadway. Get a claim check. Advertise the article. Reclaim it if the owner does not.

THE LAW—People who find lost articles are interested in knowing that the State Law (Sections 8475 to 8480, Revised Statutes of Missouri, 1899) is strict in requiring them to seek the owners through advertisement and otherwise, and that a failure to do so, if same can be proven, involves a severe penalty.

CONGRESSMEN IN REPORT ASK THAT BALLINGER RESIGN

Four Democrats and One Insurgent on Committee Join in the Findings.

4 REPUBLICANS SILENT

Pinchot Held Blameless and Secretary Is Called Unfaithful to Trust.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 10.—Five of the nine members of the congressional commission appointed to inquire into the merits of the controversy between Secretary of the Interior Ballinger and Gifford Pinchot, deposed Chief Forester, have decided that Pinchot was blameless and that Ballinger was unfaithful to his trust. A demand for his resignation is recommended.

This is a partial outcome of the long series of hearings which have been held here and in Washington. The four Republican members have made no report. Those submitted here are by the four Democratic members of the committee and an independent finding by Representative Madison, a Kansas insurgent.

The Madison report declares that Ballinger "should not be retained, that he was an unfaithful trustee of the people's interest, an enemy of conservation," and that the charges of Gifford Pinchot should be sustained.

Republicans Stay Away.

These findings will be printed and filed with Congress. The decision of the four Democratic members and Representative Madison to make the reports public followed a session which was unusual. Three Republican members, Senator Sutherland of Utah and Representatives McCall of Massachusetts and Denby of Michigan, refused to attend the meeting. Finally the chairman of the committee himself, Senator Nelson of Minnesota, departed from the committee room and failed to return.

Chairman Nelson gave notice that a meeting would be held in Chicago on next Tuesday. The Democratic members adjourned to meet again in Washington on Dec. 3.

Representative Ollie M. James of Kentucky, one of the Democratic members, announced that all the Democrats would refuse to attend the meeting of which Senator Nelson has given notice. The Republicans will then be in the same position that the Democratic members and Mr. Madison found themselves at the meeting just closed.

Report by the Democrats.

Summarized, the Democratic findings declare that the evidence shows:

That there was no conspiracy against Ballinger.

That Gifford Pinchot and L. R. Glavis were faithful trustees of the peoples' interests.

That Ballinger's conduct on certain occasions was intended to and did have the effect of deceiving the President.

That Ballinger's action in having clear-listed the so-called Cunningham Alaskan coal lands and ordering them patented showed bad faith.

That he advocated a bill to validate Alaskan coal claims alleged to be fraudulent.

That his action in acting as attorney in cases pending in the land office while he was Commissioner was reprehensible.

That he helped to force the Cunningham coal claims to a hearing before the Government was ready to proceed.

That he encouraged insubordination in the reclamation service and condoned improper official conduct in that connection.

Conclusions by Madison.

Madison's conclusions are:

That the charges of Glavis and Pinchot should be sustained.

That he has been unfaithful to the public interests.

That in the matter of the Cunningham coal lands he was not a faithful trustee of the people's interests.

That with regard to the reclamation service he has taken action tending towards its disintegration.

A resolution was adopted by the Democrats and Madison provided for publication of the findings and at this juncture Senator Nelson left the committee room. Senator Fletcher was made chairman pro tem and members proceeded with their work.

The findings of the Democrats and Mr. Madison were filed with the secretary of the committee.

BURGLAR STEALS SALOONIST'S DEAD WIFE'S BROOCH AND $400

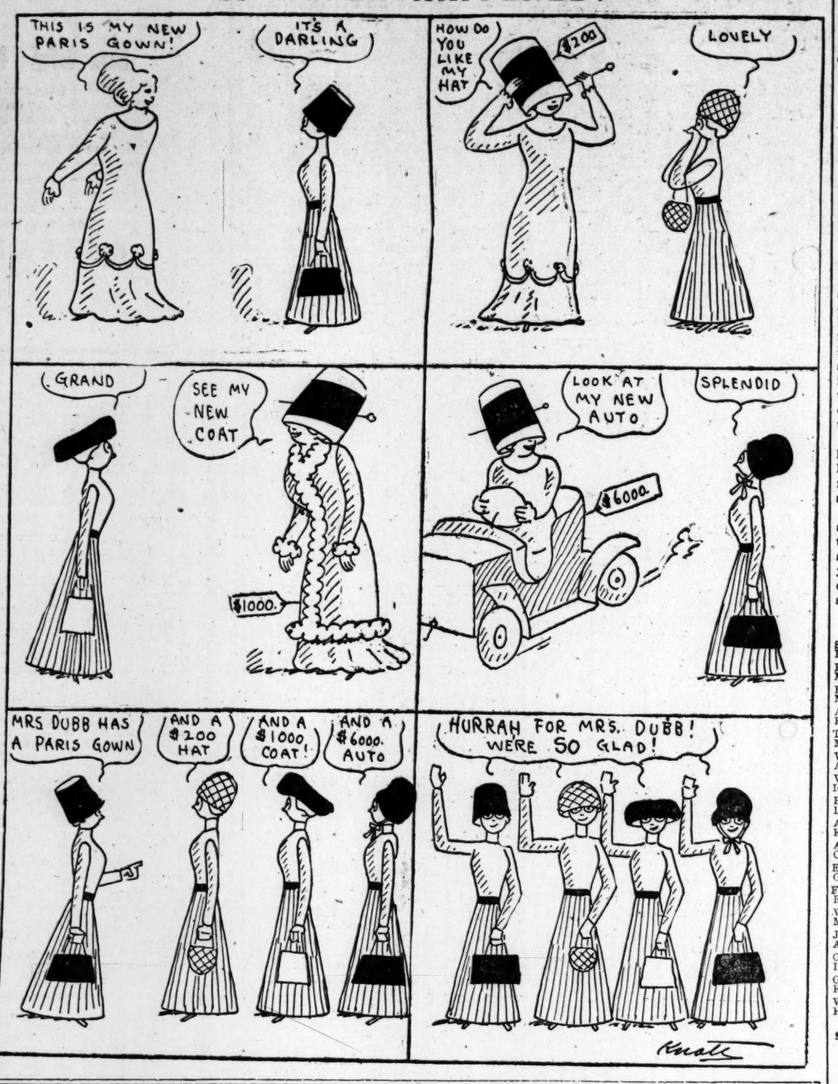

Thief Who Entered Pizzardi's Saloon Knew Combination to the Safe.

A burglar who broke into Joe Pizzardi's saloon, at 2300 Market street, early Saturday knew the combination to the safe. He opened it and took about $400 and a diamond-studded brooch valued at $40.

The brooch was the property of Pizzardi's wife, who killed herself a week ago with carbolic acid after a quarrel with neighbors. Her watch, wedding ring and diamond-set earrings were untouched. The burglar left a check for $36, which was in a cigar box with the larger bills.

A burglar who entered the place six months ago did not know the combination to the safe, and he stole 50 cents from the cash register. Pizzardi thinks someone watched him open the safe and learned the combination in that way.

IT NEVER HAPPENED!

SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY CHORUS TO HAVE 500 VOICES

Nucleus for Celebration on Oct. 2 Is Being Trained at Y. M. C. A.

Prof. H. W. Becker has asked for 500 volunteer singers for a chorus at a rally of the St. Louis Sunday School Association at the Coliseum Oct. 2. He heads the committee in charge. The nucleus of the chorus, 100 voices, is being trained by Prof. Joseph A. Rose on Friday nights at the Young Men's Christian Association, Grand and Franklin avenues.

The Rev. W. Douglass Buchanan of Newark, N. J., will address a men's meeting Sunday at 4 p. m. at the Central Y. M. C. A. on the subject, "A Vital Ignorance."

The Rev. Dr. H. Magill, clerk of the St. Louis Presbytery, will preach morning and night Sunday at the West Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. A. V. Garthoeffner, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic Church, who was recently named superintendent of parochial schools, has been appointed as chaplain of the Ursuline Convent, Twelfth street and Russell avenue.

Plans for the winter's work were outlined at the first of this season's meetings of the East St. Louis branch of the Queen's Daughters at the residence of Mrs. Eugene Halloran, vice-president.

The Rev. L. Puffer, assistant pastor at St. Liborius' Church, is attending the Eucharistic Congress in Montreal.

Archbishop Glennon has appointed the Rev. C. J. Kane, former pastor of the Sacred Heart Church at New Franklin, Mo., to the pastorate of St. Columbkille's Parish.

At the Pilgrim Congregational Church, Union boulevard and Kensington avenue, the Rev. Charles S. Mills, D. D., will preach Sunday morning on "The Child of God in His Father's World," and at night on "The Brotherhood of Labor."

The Very Rev. F. V. Nugent, C. M., will conduct a two-weeks' mission at SS. Mary and Joseph's Church, beginning Sept. 25. The first week will be devoted to the women of the parish and their friends, and the second week will be exclusively for the men. The Rev. Father Martin S. Brennan is pastor.

G. Bassom, a Turk, will speak from the pulpit of the Salem Reformed Church, Fourteenth street and Sullivan avenue, Sunday evening. He is the son of an eminent pasha at Constantinople and was formerly a Mohammedan. When he embraced Christianity it is said he forfeited an income of $15,000 a year in his native country.

Bishop Tuttle of the Episcopal Diocese of St. Louis will administer confirmation Sunday morning to a class at St. Alben's Episcopal Chapel.

The annual convention for the election of officers of the St. Louis Sunday School Association will be held Tuesday night at St. Mark's English Evangelical Lutheran Church, Bell and Cardinal avenues. Each Sunday school will be entitled to representation at the convention by the pastor of the church, superintendent of the Sunday school and one additional delegate for each 100 or major fraction thereof of the school enrollment.

The Rev. Benvenuto Mueller, O. F. M., has been transferred from the local chapter of the Franciscans to the convent at Teutopolis, Ill. He will conduct a mission in the vicinity.

A farewell service for the Rev. M. R. Akens and his wife will be held Sept. 18 at the First German Presbyterian Church. They have accepted appointments as missionaries to India under the direction of the Presbyterian Foreign Missions Board.

The Rev. J. Hollister Lynch, former rector of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, has declined a call to a pastorate at Springfield, Ill., and will remain in St. Louis.

The Rev. J. Layton Mauze, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, has resumed his duties on his return from his summer vacation and will conduct services at the church Sunday.

The Rev. J. G. Kessler, pastor of the First German Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. J. Johnson, pastor of the Winnebago Presbyterian Church, will take part in the program of the three-day mission fest at Wood River, Fosterburg, and Woodburn, Mo., beginning Tuesday.

The Sunday evening services will be resumed Sunday at the Maple Avenue Reformed Church. The pastor, the Rev. J. H. String, will begin a series of Wednesday night lectures on "The Letters of St. Paul" next Wednesday evening at the church.

OFFICIALS AT CAPITAL THOUGHT BOWERS WAS OUT OF DANGER

Letter Had Been Received Just Before Death, Saying Crisis Had Been Passed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The news of the death of Solicitor-General Bowers came as a surprise to the officials of the Department of Justice and to his friends in Washington. Only a few moments before his death was announced, a letter was received at the Department of Justice from Boston, stating the crisis in Bowers' illness had passed.

Assistant Attorney-General Fowler, in charge of the department, closed all the offices. Barton Corneau, one of the assistants to the Solicitor-General, left Washington at once for Boston, to render whatever services he may to the family.

The death of the Solicitor-General will disturb the calendar for the Supreme Court, at least at the beginning of the term. Several of the cases on which Bowers was working were set for argument Oct. 11, or as soon thereafter as they could be reached. It is believed that even if his successor were appointed before the court convenes, that he would hardly feel himself justified in arguing these cases at the beginning of the terms.

Child Shocked to Death.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 10.—Helen, 3-year-old daughter of Bernard Hoke, wire chief of Central Union Telephone Co., touched an uninsulated part of a dynamo while with her mother calling on her father and was killed instantly.

MARONEY PAID TO PROSECUTE THEFTS FROM POLICE FUND

Chief Young Declares Attorney Received $2500 to Finish Cases.

Attorney A. C. Maroney will be called upon to return to St. Louis and prosecute former Secretary Healy of the Police Relief Fund, and others, charged with being implicated in the looting of the fund, according to the statement of Chief of Police Young to a Post-Dispatch reporter Saturday. Chief Young said that Maroney was recommended to take up the prosecution by Chief of Detectives Smith and Inspector McDonnell, and says it will be their task to find the attorney and cause him to complete his contract.

"When Attorney Maroney was paid his fee of $2500 to take up the prosecution of the men charged with illegally spending the money of the police fund, it was with the distinct understanding that he should follow the prosecution to the end," Chief Young stated.

"Chief Smith and Inspector McDonnell recommended Maroney as the most available man best acquainted with the details of the Police Relief Fund when the subject of employing an attorney to assist in the prosecution was brought up. I do not know officially whether Maroney is in St. Louis or Seattle, but it is up to Chief Smith and Inspector McDonnell to find him."

This statement followed the receipt of a letter Friday from Circuit Attorney Seebert G. Jones, saying that he had not promised immunity to Healy or the others charged with misusing the funds, and asking that the Police Relief Association employ an attorney to take charge of the prosecution of those under charges.

St. Louisans Retain Offices.

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—The twelfth biennial convention of the International Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Association, which met in Boston several days ago, adjourned to meet in 1912 in St. Louis. International President A. B. Lowe, and Grand Secretary-Treasurer Samuel J. Pegg, both of St. Louis, were unanimously re-elected.

WIFE TO IGNORE HUSBAND'S BILLS

She Advertises That He Has Left Her, Forfeiting Right to Her Support.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 10.—Mrs. Theresa Rosengrant, a well-known resident of South Bridge street, at Tunkhannock, warns people not to harbor her husband and declares she will not pay any bill he may contract, as he has left her board and taken the bed with him.

The advertisement, published today, says:

"Whereas, my husband, George Rosengrant, son of the late John Rosengrant and Maria Rosengrant, formerly of Forkston, has left the house rented by me and for which I paid the rent, and has left my board and taken his bedstead along with him and sold it, this is to warn all persons not to harbor or to trust him on my account, from this date, as I will pay no bills of his contracting.

"I shall continue to pay rent and to keep up my table in the usual form in his absence, and having one less to feed, I shall be pardoned, I think, if I say in better style than formerly.

"There is a hard winter creeping along and he may incite your sympathies to trust him on my account, seeing that I am doing very well, thank you, but you just keep in mind that you have received this warning and govern yourself accordingly."

Chicago Wholesale Grocer Drops Dead

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Ezra J. Warner, pioneer grocer of this city and one of the founders of a big commission house, fell dead at his home in Lake Forest, a suburb. Death is attributed to apoplexy. His winter residence was in Pasadena, Cal.

"A Toothsome Flavour"

True for you, there's a treat in the crisp, nutty, delicate sweet taste of Grape-Nuts served with cream or milk.

(Don't spoil the food by trying to cook it. That work is done and perfectly done at the factories.)

The cream should soften it a bit, but not enough to excuse the teeth from at least a few good earnest "chews," for old Dame Nature sends rich blessings to the long chewer. Of course the one with weak teeth can soften the food with milk down to a mush if necessary, but the good old Dame doesn't smile quite so cheerfully on them.

You know, children and adults must use the teeth and grind freely to make them grow strong and to preserve them. Then the act of chewing brings down the much needed saliva from the gums, and that helps amazingly in the digestion of foods of various kinds.

The saliva is not so much required with Grape-Nuts, for this food is partially pre-digested, that is, the starch turned into a form of sugar in the process of making, and that helps give it the fascinating flavour.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

TETTIGONIANS HERE TO SEE THE BALDWIN FLIGHTS

Weather Bird Solves Mystery of Green Bug Convention in Session Here.

The Weather Bird was assigned to "cover" the Tettigonian convention, and with characteristic enterprise brought one of the delegates to the office to have its picture made. The delegates look so much alike that a picture of one is as good as a flashlight group of all of them.

A popular impression prevails that the Tettigonians are annoying green bugs with no other purpose in life than to swarm about street lights and get themselves stuck up in fresh paint and constitute a public nuisance, but an exclusive interview obtained by the Weather Bird shows that this is wrong and does the bugs a serious injustice.

The hemipterous delegate who came to this office told the Weatherbird that the convention was being held here at this time in order to give the delegates an opportunity to see Capt. Baldwin make his river front flight.

Men Flyers Are Comical.

"We are very much interested in aviation," he said, "although we regard some of the efforts of men to fly as very comical. Quite a number of us were out at Forest Park when Glenn Curtiss was rolling around the field and we regarded it as one of the funniest sights we had ever seen."

"What is the occasion of this convention?" asked the Weather Bird.

"We are trying to get a pure food law passed," explained the delegate. "Our diet, as you know, is limited, because we are very fastidious about what we eat. All the delegates are complaining about the fare in St. Louis, because the smoke makes the leaves very unpalatable."

Often Inhospitably Treated.

"There are several millions," the delegate answered. "It is one of the biggest conventions we have ever held. One reason for this is the widespread interest in the pure food laws and another is that all of us like to come to St. Louis despite the inferior meals we get here. We are holding sessions every evening, various sections meeting at different places, as you may have observed. There has been a good deal of complaint in various quarters that delegates were inhospitably treated, but that, I suppose, is due to ignorance more than anything else."

The visitor paused and thrust a jointed proboscis through a sheet of copy paper while the Weatherbird made a note of what he had said.

They Have Jumping Contests.

"You might say," he continued with visible pride, "that I am chairman of the Committee of Awards for the broad-jumping contests. The competition is very lively this year. The Tettigonians always have these athletic exercises, to relieve the tedium of business. It is quite a distinction to be chairman of this committee. The finals are to begin this afternoon and I will have to leave in a few minutes, because it wouldn't do for me to be late, of course."

The Weatherbird wanted to ask whether the Tettigonians ever indulged in such frivolities as hobble skirts, but the delegate was so dignified that he didn't have the nerve, and the interview terminated here. The Weatherbird then called up Prof. James F. Abbott, at Washington University, to see what he could tell about the visitors. Prof. Abbott is an authority on zoology.

Rain May Have Sent Them Here.

"About all I can tell you," said the professor, "is that they are leaf hoppers. There are about a thousand species and I would not attempt to classify this one. They live in the grass and trees. As to the reason for their being so numerous at this time, I am in doubt; but I surmise that it is due to the absence of some enemy, which usually keeps the number down by eating their eggs. The recent rains may have had something to do with it. We always have these bugs, but we notice them more now because they are so much more numerous, that's all."

The convention has been in progress several days and will continue indefinitely, the Weatherbird was told. The bugs dance about street lights in such vast numbers to cause much annoyance and at some of the downtown hotels all the lights were extinguished Friday evening, except those actually necessary, in an effort to get rid of the bugs.

TWO BOYS PREFER LIFE IN GRANITE CITY RATHER THAN MAKE 48 BEDS EVERY DAY

Life of Chambermaids Proved Irksome to Newark Lads Who Ran Away.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 10.—"We had to make 48 beds every day. That's enough to make anyone run away."

In this way Ernest McConnell, 15 years old, who is small for his age, explained why he and his bother, who is 13 years old, left their home in Newark, N. J., bound for Granite City, Ill.

The boys were picked up by a policeman and taken to the House of Detention, where Ernest told the story of their troubles and wanderings. He said that they lived at Warren and Orleans streets in Newark, where their mother keeps an apartment house.

Each morning Ernest said he and his brother got up at 6 o'clock and got breakfast for all the members of the McConnell family. It was the duty of the boys after they had washed the breakfast dishes to go from room to room and make all the beds.

After doing work like that for a month, Ernest remembered that he had an uncle in Granite City, Ill. He found an old geography and mapped out a route. Then the boys began to save money for the trip. When they had $4 each they thought it time to leave. They slept in the woods at night, and early today arrived in Philadelphia, where a policeman found them.

WICKERSHAM WILL INSPECT FOREST FUME CONTAMINATION

BUTTE, Mont., Sept. 10.—"I shall spend the next two days in a thorough inspection of the territory known as the 'smoke zone'," said Attorney-General Wickersham, who arrived in Butte last evening, "and shall as thoroughly as possible acquaint myself with conditions as I find them. I shall be accompanied by Representatives of the Amalgamated Copper Co. and farmers of the section, and it will be my purpose to look into the matter from both sides. I shall take up the matter of fume contamination as it involves the forests of the Deer Lodge Valley, and as far as possible will go into the matter of devices for controlling the noxious gases."

Mr. Wickersham and the members of his party leave Butte this morning in automobiles on a tour of inspection of Beaver Head Forest Reserve and will reach Anaconda tonight.

Sunday Mr. Wickersham will be escorted through the Washoe Smelter.

Czar Gives $40,000 to New Jersey Church.

PASSAIC, N. J., Sept. 10.—The Czar of all the Russias is now known in Passaic as one of the city's leading philanthropists. Announcement was made this week that the Czar had contributed $40,000 toward the erection of a new Russian orthodox church at Passaic. The structure will cost $120,000.

MORFIT DRAWS A QUESTION CHART FOR PHYSICIANS

Applicants for Visiting Staff at Hospital Will Have Near-Examination.

Although the Hospital Board vetoed Hospital Commissioner Morfit's recommendation that applicants for positions on the visiting staff of city institutions be subjected to a rigid examination, he has framed a chart of questions for aspirants which constitute a severe quizz.

In addition, one condition is that any applicant, if required, shall appear before the Hospital Board for an oral examination concerning his medical training. These lists of queries have been sent broadcast among the physicians of the city.

A personal appeal to any member of the board for support will act as a disqualification for the candidate, Dr. Morfit ordains.

There are 11 headings in the chart, two of which are to be filled out by the members of the board. They concern the personality and general professional reputation of the candidate.

The other questions are in regard to the candidate's years of practice, his academical and professional education, his hospital experience, teaching positions and orignal researches; his contributions, if any, to medical literature and his membership or official position in medical societies.

Each of the headings will receive a maximum value in points, which will total 100. Appointments are to be made from those winning the highest gradings, beginning with the top men.

WOMEN WATCHERS AT POLLS FOR DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE

Aspirant for Party District Leadership in New York Author of Innovation.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—For the primary election next Tuesday Francis P. Coughlin of the Thirteenth Assembly District has decided to appoint two women watchers for each of the polling places in the district.

Mr. Coughlin is a candidate for the Democratic leadership in his district, but he is accepting the feminine volunteers without regard to their political beliefs.

Among those who will qualify are Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch, Mrs. Lee De Forrest, Miss Alberta Hall and Miss Adelina Byrd of the Equality League of Self-Supporting Women, Miss Caroline Leacom and Miss Jessie Ashley of the Collegiate Equal Suffrage League.
